The discovery of a major urban civilization that rose in northern Syrin 4,400 years ago and rivaled its only contemporaries, Mesopotamia and Egypt, is being acclaimed as one one of the most significant archeological advances of the century.

The unearthing of the Kingdom of Ebla by Italian researchers, first reported in this country last fall, was described in New York at the annual meeting of the Archeological Institute of America as "one of those rare discoveries that transform our knowledge of ancient man."

The most significant find was that of the palace archives, which contained 15,000 clay tablets inscribed with cuneiform writings that, though still only partly deciphered, attest to a vast commercial and cultural empire that flourished for nt least 800 years, political unrest in a city about 100 miles south of here has reportedly erupted into armed conflict, forcing Peking to intervene to quell it,

The report, mede here tonight by reliable sources, was another in a growing series of accounts of disorders linked to supporters of Chiang Ching, the widow of Mao Tse-tung, and three other radicals who have been accused of plotting to seize power.

The informants said that the conflict, which flared in the city of Paoting, had been marked by raids on military arsecals, the blowing up of factories, loctiog of grain stores and shops, bank robberies, nurder and rape. Paoting is on China's main north-south railroad line and the violence there has reportedly disrupted the shipment of relief materials to the earthquake-devastated city of Tangshan.

It was not clear whether President-elect. REMEMBER THE NEEDIEST!

Despite the outlawing of the sect that created the dance, performance by the whirling dervishes is permitted two weeks every year in Konya, Turkey. Ostensibly a tourist attraction, the dance still stirs religious spirit.

Spark of Religious Fervor Still Strong in Turkey

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS

KONYA, Turkey-The pilgrims shuffle slowly into the green-domed mausoleum, the mud of their fields still clinging to their plastic shoes. When they reach the sarcophagus, they raise their bands chest high, palms up, and begin to murmur the old prayers. Some try to kneel on the brightly patterned prayer rugs, but the guard usually stops them. Officially, the building is now a museum, and devotion cannot be too

The sarcophagus contains the remains of Meviana Celaleddin Rumi, one of Turkey's greatest poets and mystics, who died here 703 years ago this month. The steady procession of pilgrims to his hier symbolizes one of Turkey's greatest problems.

After Mevlana's death, his followers formed a religious sect and called themselves "Mevlevis." Westerners knew them as the "whirling dervishes," after the trancelike dance they performed as part of their weekly ritual.

Dervish means beggar in Turkish and there were more than a dozen such there were more than a dozen such sects under the Ottoman Empire. When Kemal Ataturk created the Turkish republic after World War I, he felt that Islamic doctrines and leaders were blocking the country's modernization. Accordingly, he abolished all dervish orders, including the Mevlevis, and closed all their centers, or "tekkes." But more than 50 years after the But more than 50 years after the Ataturk reforms, the spark of Islamic fervor still glows in the hearts of many

"Religion is a human fact in every country. Even in Russia religion has not been suppressed," said Ibrahim Cubuken, professor of thenlogy at Ankara University. "In a democratic country like Turkey, the dervish orders were bound to continue." To other Turks, these religious impulses pose a dangerous threat to progress. "You have to be a Turk to understand our struggle against the religious people," said a journalist. "No one has the right to leave the next generation a dark Turkey." .The Koran, the Moslem holy book, prescribes a whole set of laws that the religionists want to re-impose on Turkish life, the journalist noted. And in 1973, a religious-oriented party won enough seats in Parliament to hold the balance of power, and is now a member of the governing coalition.

Wellspring of Culture Konva has been a wellspring of culture and ideas since nenlithic times and by the 13th century it was the capital of the Seljuks, the Turkish tribe that first stormed out of Central Asia and settled in the West.

Meylana was born in Balkh, a city that is now in northern Afghanistan His father, a noted philosopher, moved the family westward to escape the Mongol invasions and settled here under the patronage of the Seljuk rulet.

The Turks were still new converts to Islam, and Meviana's work drew beavily on the Asian and Shamanistic beavily on the Asian and Shamanisticheritage of his people. He introduced music and dance into the ritual, practices that were banned in the austere world of Arabic Islam. His poetry had an unusually tolerant and bumanistic flavor, as exemplified by one famous verse, the favorite of the local tourist office. "Course come are a recommendation of the second course o office ... Come, come again, whoever, you may be, come."

lervish orders were more warless open-minded, however,

For a period we stopped our religious way of living," said Adil Gucuy-ener, publisher of the daily Yeni Konya. "But it came to a point where we un-derstood it was a loss for us. We started to get back and learn about our ood and our religion.

Some Would Join Mevievis In 1954, Konya received special permission to revive the dance of the whirling dervishes for two weeks every year. One of the last genuine dervishes left is Ahmet Bican Kasaboglu, who serves as dance master for the troupe Officially, the dance is now per-formed strictly for the tourists. But part of the original spirit clearly re-

"The students 1 have trained are Mavlevis, even though they do different work," said Mr. Kasabogiu hefore one performance. "While I teach them how to dance, I also tell them to read certain books, to cultivate their minds."

It is a tonchy subject, but some of the new attack helicopter wanted by the dancers say privately that they were legal. "Are we lawful or not?" asked the dance master, who has a law degree and worked for the Istanbul municipality. "In our country wa are outlaws, but the Government helps pay our

Mr. Kasaboglu bopes his 9-year-old grandniece will dance one day as a legal Mevievi. "We are dervishes," be said with a small smile. "We are pasain with a small smile. We are pa-tient people, we know how to wait." This kind of talk embarrasses and outrages many Turks, who cling to Ataturk's vision of Western European Turkey Dr. Niyazi gun, a prominent physician here, walked out of the der-vish performance and said scornfully,

"It has no meaning, it was boring."

Asked if he felt a loss because he was raised without religion, Dr. Gun replied: "Certainly not, there was no loss. I have two sons and one daughter, and they knew about Kemal Ataturk before they knew anything about reli-

Britain Prepares to Use Warsh To Protect Oil Fields in North

Early in 1977, Britain's Royal Navy will deploy five small warships as the first step toward military protection of the North Sea oil and gas fields.

By early in the 1980's these fields will include 80 to 100 platforms and 6,000 miles of pipeline and will be producing one-third of the oil requirements of the European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Adm. Isaac C. Kidd, Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic and his staff are planning for the more powerful defense of the fields in war. The other NATO member directly involved besides Britain in Norway, but West Germany, the Netherlands, Denmark, Beigium and France, all of which will be in the market for Norwegian or British North Sea oil, are also interested in the defense of the

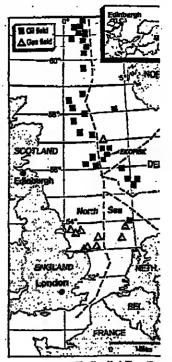

A British Government announcement said that the navy would put into service said that the navy would put muo service "five lightly armed offshore patrol vessels capable of remaining at sea for long periods and fitted with rapid means of communication" with naval and police installations ashore.

Tha British and other interested govsibility that such groups as the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Irish Republican Army might sabotage the oil fields. All recognize the danger to the oil fields in the event of East-West

A senior officer speculated that the Palestine Liberation Organization might launch attacks by frogmen against the pipelines. The P.L.O. and its backers in the Arab world, he reasoned, would recognize that once the oil fields were in full production Europe's reliance on Middle East Oil would be reduced and so would the Arabs' ability to use oil as an economic weapon, as they did in as an economic weapon, as they did in the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

The defense of the fields in war is complicated because of their extent and their proximity to the main bases of Soviet sea and air power in northern Europe. Russian forces at these bases have recently been strengthened by the deployment of the new Soviet bomber and by the steady growth of the northern fleet based on Murmansk.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25-The Congres-WASHINGTON, Dec. 25—The Congressional Budget Office suggested today that the Army was buying the wrong type of helicopter and planning to form the wrong kind of division if it is expected to fight a short, intense war in Europe. # Ties That Bind Soviet Bloc More Economic Than Politicated

BUCHAREST, Rumania-Just a few hours before he greeted Leonid L Brezhnev at Bucharest's airport, President Ni-colae Ceausescu of Rumania made time to see another visitor, Secretary of Com-merce Elliot L. Richardson.

The occasion was a new Rumanian-American agreement aimed at increasing trade between the two countries to $1 billion by 1980. The juxtaposition of the two meetings underlined Mr. Ceausescu efforts to Reep Rumania on an independent course.

Such feisty self-reliance has carried a price tag. Rumania has wrought its own industrialization by holding down on consumer goods and plowing a third of its income back into capital investments. It is the only Soviet-bloc country that gets no Soviet oil. Instead, it augments its domestic production, less than 15 millioo tons, with costly imports from the Middle East. "To be independent politically, we have to be independent economically," explained one Rumanian.

coal, worth $165 million last year. The Soviet Union may account for only 20 percent of Rumania's trade, but it re-mains its higgest commercial partner. Moscow's most faithful European ally, Bulgaria, conducts more than half its for eign trade with the Soviet Union.

The ties that bind Eastern Europe to the Soviet Unioo are today conspicuously the Soviet Union are today conspicuously more economic than political. Moscow retains a unique advantage as not only the undisputed leader of the Eastern bloc hut also its chief source of raw materials and energy. Moscow supplies its East European allies with two-thirds of their mineral and fuel needs, including at least 90 percent of the oil required by such energy-poor nations as East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

At a time of economic uncertainty, such

At a time of economic nucertainty, such leverage has prohably been more effective in keeping the East European countries in line than the 31 Soviet divisions garrisoned in their hackyards. "The Soviets have the upper hand," explained one East Berliner. "They can always cut off our oil, toke and ore."

Yet Maccon has found it expansion to

Yet Moscow has found it expensive to keep underwriting its allies with raw ma-terials at prices well below the world market level. Indeed, until the abrupt Soviet readjustment of oil prices in early 1975, it could be argued that the East Europeans were getting the better of the economic bargain.

By the early 1970's, a number of East European countries were taking advantage of the honeymoon in East-West relations to reorient their economies more toward the Industrialized capitalist comries. The motivation went beyond a de-sire for more economic independence. This most of their raw materials came from the Soviet Union, the best technolo-

Recession Hurt Their Efforts But these efforts were blunted by the recession that shrunk potential Western markets while inflation raised the cost of imports from the West. The impact of the Western economic crisis oo Eastern Europe was forestalled for a while by the Soviet Union's availability as both consumer and supplier.

The unheaval came when Moscow, in the West, renegotiated its five-year contracts with Eastern Europe a year be-fore they were to expire and raised the prices of critical raw materials. For the fixed rates on oil if substituted a sliding scale pegged to average world prices of the preceding several years.

Such hard-hit countries as Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland found their oil costs virtually doubled. This confirmed that Moscow was hent on exploiting its oartners. The Soviet Union, which had seen its deliveries subsidize the higher less willing to settle for shoddy merchanliving standards of its bloe neighbors, felt that it was rectifying a glaring imbalance. Soviet oil prices still ran a third below to accept some Czechoslovak power the world market price. This gap is narthe suspicions of some East Europeans rowing as rates climb. The rude awakening has spurred some countries to seek ways to get more flex-ibility into the planned economies im-posed on them after World War II. The wastefulness of materials and labor in the original Soviet models was tolerable only while Moscow supplied the raw materials cheaply.

Western banking specialists estimate that Soviet-bloc indebtedness to the West could approach $40 hillion by the end of 1976. #### U.S. Expected to Back Continuance of Curb on Shots and Allow More Time to Study Paralysis Cases

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr. Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, Dec. 29—A group of experi advisers to the Federal Government today recommended continuing the presen moratorium on influenza vaccinations because of the possible risk of a rare form of paralysis called Godlein-Barré Syn-

Their recommendation against resuming the flu immunization programs at least for the time being appears almost certain to become Federal Government policy. Dr. David Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control here, the Federal agency that has been managing the huge nationwide swine flu program, said he had communicated the advisory panel's recommendation to Washington by tele-phone today. He said Dr. Theodore Coop-er, Assistant Secretary for Health in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, upon hearing the recommendation, had said he concurred.

Dr. Sencer also communicated the recommendation by telephone conference call to all 50 state health officers.

The recommendation worked out today by the advisory group would allow doc-tors to use the vaccine for individual patients if both doctor and patient thought it was needed, but only if the doctor obtained his patient's informed consent. This would include the understanding that there might be some small risk of neurological harm—in short, Guillain— Barré paralysis.

At a news conference after the allafternoon meeting of the Advisory Com-nittee on Immunization Practices, Dr. encer said the risk of the serious, some imes fatal, illness appeared to be only bout one chance in one or two million, at he said the advisory committee had alt there was some significant evidence sociating the rare disorder with the use

The advisory committee put no time limit on the extension of the moratorium but the members appeared to believe two or three to several weeks would be needed to determine the true degree of risk linking flu vaccine and Guillain-Barré

While it is not certain that there is any risk, Dr. Sencer said the committee of experts appeared to believe the evi-dence associating vaccination with the illness was significant. Several members illness was significant. Several members of the advisory committee and other expects at the meeting suggested that the risk, presumably very small, might apply not only to flu vaccine but also to other vaccinations as well, but that the effect had not previously been detected because there had never before been such an interesting effort at structure and an intensive effort at surveillance of a vac-cine's effects coupled with such a huge number of vaccinations given.

The once-fashionable Back Bay hotel has been the scene of three fires in three years, and Deputy Fire Chief Leo Staple ton called this blaze "suspicious." The

Now you can call Italy almost as easily as you call Little Italy.*

New York Telephone has discovered a faster route to 36 foreign countries.

It's called International Dialing. And it allows you to make overseas telephone calls from nearly 200 exchanges* in New York City without going through an operator.

To call Rome, Italy, for example, you just dial the International Access Code (011), the Country Code (39), the City Routing Code (6) and the local number. .

And overseas calls are a lot cheaper than you may think. For example, a customer-dialed, station-to-station, 3-minute minimum call costs . only $6.75 to Rome, $8.00 to Hong Kong and $3.60 to England. (Rates do not include taxes.)

'Perfect' Walnut Tree Is Among 18 Sold for $80,00

By REGINALD STUART
Special in The New York Times

PIONEER Ohio - Roger rett, a state forest service officer in the northwestern part of Ohio for some 17 years, is not one who gets easily excited over a new tree story. He thought he had heard them all.

But recently, Mr. Herrett and many of the so-called tree veterans in this region witnessed a tree story that they will be talking about for years.

It was the sale, for $80,000.01, of 18 black walnut trees, including one that the hardwood industry considered the most perfect and valuable black walnut tree in the nation. When the bidding was over, Hernam Meyer, the head of the Atlantic Veneer Corpora-tion of Beaufort, N. C., tha new owner-of "the perfect tree," put its value at $30,000.

'Don't Make Them Anymore' The tree now called the "Bicentennial Tree" by its new owners, was between 180 and 200 years old. It measured 57 feet to its first limb and was more than 130 feet high. Its diameter was 38.4 inches at 4½ feet above ground and its circumference at that height was 10½ feet.

"It was majestic," said Mr. Herrett, who was among those who gathered for the cutting of the tree with cameras in hand. "I've seen perfect logs 20 feet long, but to have this perfectness spread over 57 feet, well, as old George Goebel said. They don't make them kind anymore."

"I've known about this tree for 15 years," said Mr. Meyer, president of Atlantic Veneer. "We get a lot of calls and letters on other trees, but it is very unlikely that there would be another one like this very unlikely. We're cut-ting hundreds of trees a day, but this one is special."

Most black walnut trees bring a price ranging from $150 to $3,000, at most. But top bidders for "the tree" said that would have brought at least $15,000 had it been sold separately. Mixing it with a group of trees, not an uncommon practice, made the competition among the five bidders even tougher with the starting price set at $40,000. Although most of the bidders felt the other trees in the group were not of much value, several went all the way to get the big tree. The second highest bidder, the David R. Webb Company of Indiana, offered $78,750.

Still Some Good Ones Around The sale of "the tree" has generated a new wave of enthusiasm in this region, and in other parts of the Corn. elt, known for its supply of fine quality black walnut trees. And although Pioneer, a village with a population of 1,000, has seen the best of its days as a walnut tree town, there are still some good ones around. I'm getting more calls everyday now from people who want me to come out and look at their walnut tree," said Mr. Herrett, a tall thin man who knows almost every farmer around and has looked at thousands of trees during his career. "All of a sudden, everybody who bas a walnut tree thinks, Mine

Everyone must be entitled to a favorite musical. Mine, apart from "Aïda," is "Fiddler on the Roof." I have seen it about 15 times, and always with pleasure. I customarily cry in the same places and spend all of the finale surreptitiously dusting down tears.

I shall always remember how I first heard of "Fiddler." I was living in London. Jerome Robbins was passing through. It was years ago. He called from the sirport. I ago. He called from the surport. I think I was interviewing him. Or meant to be. I asked him what he was doing. He said a musical based on Sholom Aleichem. I said: "Nice!" Off Broadway?" He said, no—it was a big show, big. I said: "Nice!" I always believe in bumoring geniuses. But a musical based on Sholom Aleichem? lom Aleichem?

On Tuesday night at the Winter Garden Theater, that musical, based on Sholom Aleichem, returned for a limited run. It was heaven. Come to think of it, the show should never have left New York. It should be a fixture, like the Empire State Building. Or motherhood. And for me, it was a very special occasion, a very special privilege.

I had never had the opportunity of writing about Zero Mostel in "Fiddler." I saw him, of course, but never wrote about him. Almost every other Tevye, from Luther Adler onward, became part of my critical territory. But never Zero.

Zero Mostel as Tevye in "Fiddler" He could charm the hirds off the trees in a deserted aviary.

And now, I am speechless. Well, not quite. But mildly inarticulate. "Fiddler" is a celebration of two people. Okay, three people, for Sholom Aleichem did contribute a silent lot. But, basically, it is Mr. Robbins and Mr. Mostel. Two people who are less than close. Now, the book was by Joseph Stein, the music was by Jerry Bock and the lyrics were by Sheldon Harnick. All were superb. But the chemistry was Mr. Robbins and Mr. Mostel. This was "Fiddler." "Fiddler" is a celebration of two

Now that chemistry is back. The book, the music, the lyrics, are absolutely perfect. There is not a song—and in this it is like the only other "perfect" musical, "My Fair Lady"—that you could coosider being changed. Yet Mr. Mostel does indeed bring some-quite extraordinarily special to the show.

Mr. Mostel is an outrageous actor and, quite probably—even per-haps quite definitely—should not be dangerously encouraged. He be dangerously encouraged. He does go too far. In the present "Fiddler," he is almost being paid to see how far he is willing to go and, like many of our greatest actors, he is self-indulgent. At times he seems to be ad-libbing, his eye-brows pierce heavenward with a downright exaggeration, and his eyes boggle at the drop of a joke-yet the man is there. Yet, the man is there.

Great acting is either matchless impersonation—this is the style of, say, Laurence Olivier—or simply the pressure of one consistent image. Mr. Mostel never plays anything other than 15 march 1 thing other than Mr. Mostel. This should be ghastly, but simply be-cause Mr. Mostel happens to be so cause Mr. Mostel happens to de so interesting, it works like a grand slam. Mr. Mostel gambles everything on being Mr. Mostel, It is a fascinating, during spectacle. When we see that particular identification with self in the theater, we shudder a little, and notice.

Mr. Mostel has no real right to be charming, but he could charm the birds off the trees in a desert-ed aviary. He is the kind of monster you would unavailingly search Loch Ness for, and, in passing, make into a legend.

The whole production is exceptionally good. When you come back to Broadway, you either have to be that little bit better, or at least that little bit different to persuade people that you are that little bit better. Ruth Mitchell, in charge of the direction, and Tom charge of the direction, and 10m Abhott, in charge of the choreography, have truly made Mr. Robbins's work re-live. They have done a lovely job. The show looks pristine. And, of course, the settings of Boris Aronson and the costumes of Patricia Zipprodt retain their old vitality.

The cast is good. Thelma Lee has a sweetly wary toughness as Golde, and it is always splendid to see Paul Lipsoo back in this play (now he is acting his original role as Lazar Wolf, but as Tevye himself he has probably played the self, he has probably played the role more often oo Broadway than anyone else).

"Fiddler on the Roof." What can I tell you? If a critic always cries just before a finale, idiotically on cue, then the show must be doing something right. Right? Of course, right.

Salzburg Marionettes Present 'Magic Flute'

By RAYMOND ERICSON

In its weekloog engagement at Alice Tully Hall, the Salzburg Mari-coettes have been concentrating on the presentation of fairy tales, on the presentation of fairy tales, ideal boliday fare for children. On Tuesday night, they gave the first of the three opera performances that were scheduled and ended up with another fairy tale. This was "The Magic Flute," raised by Mozart's music to the realm of high art, but still filled with the fantasy and illusion that appeal to the young.

The puppet production has been in the Salzburgers' repertory for many years, and it has not lost its markable about it, perhaps, is how complex materials have been coordinated to produce a smooth-running performance that nearly makes one come to believe the puppets are live.

There are, for example, four sets of personalities involved: the puppets themselves, their manipulators, the German-singing cast in the accompanying recording, and the cast of English-speaking actors for the taped dialogue. The listener does get a jolt in the switch from one language to another, but the car adapts to the disparity as the performance goes along, and the performance goes along, and the miniature visual delights compen-

No dragon over slithered across the stage so sinuously as the one that opens this production, and no animals have ever been so amus-ingly antic. Papageno, the bird-catcher, hops around the stage as no opera singer has ever been able to do. To Tuesday's audience, he became the hero of the story and at the end was awarded the greatest applause for any of the characters. The biggest hand went, quite naturally, the Burg Harnarm Airher. raily, to Prof. Hermann Aicher, director of the company and, at 74, still one of its puppeteers.

The all-important music is supplied by the Deutsche Grammaphon recording conducted by Fer-enc Fricsay, an old one no longer listed in the catalogues in the Uoit-ed States. It is a superb perform-peated tonight, and Johann Strauss's "Die Fledermaus" will be done tomorrow night. For the Mozart opera, some knowledge of the plot is important to the prospec-tive viewer, because the English dialogue is not enough to keep the

'Moods of Oriental Dance,' Offbeat Event, Stars Navida

Belly dancing would be one name for most of what was oo view Tuesday night in au offbeat program at the Hudson Guild Theater, 441 West 26th Street.

Yet it is the wrong name, according to Navida, the star of the program, entitled "Moods of the Oriental Dance." Navida, it turns out, is an American who graduated from Smith College, and she takes a highly academic but not uninteresting approach to what she calls "Oriental dance" or "the interpretative dance style of the Belly dancing, performed with the dancer rooted in one spot, is only a small aspect of this widerranging style, she declares in a program note. By the end of the evening (the program will be repeated tonight), she has made her case. It is clear that Navida and has discipled did not right up their her disciples did not pick up their muscle control at a Bloomingdale's course in the danse du ventre.

Instead they offer some fascinating insight into a very specific, nating insight into a very specific, unfamiliar dance technique that clearly has its own conventions. Any aficionado of flamenco will have no trouble with it. There is the same "Oriental," sinuous use of the arms. And in her final solo, the curver produced by Navide's pelvis quiver produced by Navida's pelvis was as much a display of technical virtuosity as the quiver of the leg by a flamenco dancer in his zapa-teado.

Unfortunately, the execution of the dancing seems hardly firstrate, even to a nonspecialist. Yet the concepts are interesting. Navida has shown the range of the style—with body parts moving in isolation of one another—to a series of theatricalized tableaux that range in locale from Judea to Byzantium. Guest artists included Marian Sarach, Marta Zorina and a fine reader of poetry, Marilyn Thornton. Eddi Kochak's ensemble provided

Two United States Senators, Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, and Lowell P. Weicker of Connecticut, are separating from their wives. Marie Louise Weicker yesterday asked Su-perior Court in Stamford for a divorce, saying in her complaint, filed under the stata's no-fault law, that her 23-year-old marriage to the Republican Senator was "irretrievably broken." And in McDonough, Ga., it was Mr. Talmadge who yesterday filed a peti-tion for divorce from his wife of 35 years, Betty Talmadge, Under Georgia's no-fault divorce law, the Democrat stated only that he and his wife had heen living apart, and their marriage was irretrievably broken. In the case of the Weicker divorce, Mrs. Weicker asked for custody of the couple's 16-year-old son, Gray G. Weicker, An-other son, Scot B. Weicker, is 18 years old. The Talmadges' only living son, Herman Jr., is 34 years old.

In Stockholm, King Carl XVI Gustaf of Sweden was being credited with saving the life of a young Chinese woman with the aid of his black Labrador dog Ali. After a Christmas Eve dinner with his wife, Queen Silvia, and his sister, Princess Christina, and her husband, the 30-year-old King took Ali for a walk in subfreezing temperatures in Ulriksdal Palace Park. Ali stopped suddenly and sniffed his way to a snowbank, where Gustaf found a light-ly dressed woman who was unconscious. He carried her into the royal palace, tried to revive her and called for an ambulance, which took her to a hospital. The woman, whose name was not disclosed, is out of danger. She was said to be a student, a recent arrival from Hong Kong who, after a party, went out to look at the snow, an unusual sight for her. She apparently was nvercome by the hitter cold, resigned under fire as President Ford's campaign adviser after it was alleged that he misused his office to obtain a favorable United States Forest Service ruling that allowed for expansion of the Crested Butte ski area in Colorado, where Mr. Callaway and his brother had bought a resort develop-ment corporation in 1970. Now Mr. Callaway is moving to Crested Butte to become president and chief executive officer of the corporation. He succeeds his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, who succeeds him as board chairman.

The Presidential Inauguration Committee has commissioned five well-known artists to record their impressions of the celebrations in Washing-ton next month. The committee hopes to sell 100 sets of the artists' signed prints for $2,500 each to help pay the inaugural bills. Two of the artists have already executed magazine cover por-traits of President-elect Carter: Andy Warhol, whose portrait of Mr. Carter was on the Sept. 26 cover of The New York Times Sunday Magazine, and Jamle Wyeth, who did the current Time magazine Man of the Year cover. The other artists expected to be in Washington for the inauguration are Roy Lichtenstein, Jacob Lawrence, and Robert Rauschenberg.

When his hicycle collided with a car in Spokana, Wash, Patrick Tavernia, a stage director for the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, suffered serious injuries. Mr. Tavernia, who is 51 years old, was riding a bicycle near his mother's home when the accident occurred. The police said he had failed to stop at a red light and hit a car-driven hy Joseph Walling. He is in the intensive care unit at Sacred Heart Medical Center, under treatment for a skull fracture and multiple injuries.

Getty, sons of the late J. Paul Getty, have received almost $1 million each as their first fees as executors of their father's $720-million estate. A court in Los Angeles also ordered payment of about $1.1 million to a third executor, the Title Insurance and Trust Company. It was estimated that the Getty sons' first executor commission payments were about half the amount they will eventually receive, since total commissions will be more than $7 million. It will probably take several years to pro-bata the will.

Remember Howard H. Callaway? He

a lawyer, announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Lisu-tenant Governor of Virginia. Mr. Robb, paign for Governor of West Virginia. Also leaving the board will be Cyrus R. Vance, the designated Secretary of State, and W. Michael Bhimenthal, who is to become Secretary of the Treasury.

> the African nation of Zambia, Alfred Mofya, has come out against Christmas. In fact, he urged the Government and the ruling United National Indepen-dence party to do away entirely with the holiday season, as celebrating the hirth of Jesus, he said, is a "colonial" custom forced on Zambians by missionaries who invaded the country. "It does not agree with the country's heritage," Mr. Moiya said. Although some natives of Zambia, which has a population of 4.7 million, are Christians, most adhere to traditional animistic heliefs.

About 150 young women are likely to dance the Sugarplum Fairy in various productions of "The Nutcracker" this season, but one must count Martine van Hamel's as a special treat. She appeared with Adam Luders as her cavalier in the Eglevsky Ballet's production Tuesday evening at the Nassau Coliseum. The arena is scarcely the ideal setting for the ballet, but iudicious curtains and lighting framed the production warmly, and the company did the rest.

Miss van Hamel is and has been a ballerina of distinction with American Ballet Theater for a number of years and has graced the classical repertory with her elegant, fluid approach in a variety of roles. ....

She has a naturally regal attack that suited the friendly regent of the "Land of Sweets." She presented her wonderfully assorted subjects, "Coffee," "Chocolate," "Tea" and "Candy Canes," for the entertainment of the visiting Clara and her Prince and danced quite beautifully for them her-

She danced with the eelf-assured tone of the royal "we" in her own variations and was softly feminine in the arms of Mr. Luders. Together they gave the final finish to the enchanted story of Christmas dreams.

Enrico Labayen's "Soldier" was vigorous in Act I, and he led the "Candy Canes" with hrio in Act II. The Eglev-Canes" with hrio in Act II. The Eglevsky Ballet's production retains the "Coffee" variation of George Balanchine's first setting of the ballet, and it was sinuously rendered by Lowell Smith. He moved from his "flying carpet," propelled by four little girls in harem garb, to create a strong, graceful image of an exotic visitor from Java.

David Tygard's vain "Mother Ginger" presided nicely over the dancing of the eight children who emerged from heneath the enormous skirt, and Salli Silliman delicately pranced at the head of the marzipan "Mirlitons." Jane Miller and Paul Gifford were coolly mysterious in the Act I pas de deux for the Snow Queen and her Cavalier. Christmas and 'The Nutcracker' continue to go together quite happily.

The discoveries were made by Dr. Paolo Matthiae, a professor at the University of Rome who is the director of the Italian Archeological Mission to Syria. He described them in a report to the archeology meeting on Tuesday.

Dr. Matthiae had been excavating at the desert site, 34 miles south of Alep-po, since 1964, believing that the ruined and buried city was from a recent time. In 1973, however, evidence of a much older city turned up and in 1975 workers came upon a room in the royal palace that was littered with thousands of inscribed clay tablets.

A Dictionary' Is Found

The language was totally unknown to archeniogists, but a number of the characters appeared to have been bor-rowed from Sumerian, the language of the Sumerian people of Mesopotamia. Then a colleague, Dr. Giovanni Pettinato, who is a language expert, found what amounted to a dictionary of the new language, called Ehlait, that defined each word in Sumerian, a language that is language.

guage that is known to archeologists.

When this key was used, the tablets revealed that the palace was not just a minor seat of government but the center of a huge empire that traded with the surrounding agricultural peoples and communicated with the rulers of Mesonntamia and Fayort of Mesopotamia and Egypt.

"Before." Dr. Matthiae said in an interview, "Syria wae considered a peripheral region. Now we are convinced Syria was an important original center of civilization. This is a real revolution for history." for history."

The only other comparable societies of the time were those of Egypt and Mesopotamia, the latter including the nations of Akkad and Sumer. These came into flower roughly 5,000 years ago. Dr. Matthiae suspects that Ebla started as a Mesopotamian colony almost that long ago, but that it quickly evolved into an equivalent and independent center of power.

Excavations thus far have exposed ouly a few rooms in one corner of the huge palace and some adjacent structures, including towers and ceremonial staircases. The tell, or mound, pre-sumed to contain more of the ruined city, covers 140 acres. Dr. Matthiae estimates that from 10,000 to 20,000 people lived and worked in the palace, and that the kingdom had a population of 260,000.

Among the artistic artifacts found at Ebla are staircases inlaid with shells, carved wooden animals and abstract designs that decorated furniture and

The royal archives are the richest find. Although the digging revealed heaps of tablets, many broken, on the

"That is something no aristocratic surian should suffer," she insisted So, Mr. Wines came swiftly to the rescue. The sculptor welded an armature for the upper limbs and neck and now, she said, even Fay Wray would relax cradled in King Kong's left

But the full work force did not become involved until shortly before Christmas, Miss Sky had pondered out loud the problem of how to decorate this year a tree. And when she proposed doing a King Kong, her col-leagues roared their approval and fell to work. Michael McDonough, an architect-trained associate, drew plans for the silvery cardboard and wax paper-framed skystraper that would sur-

"We never considered the World Trade Center," Mr. Wines reported em-phatically, adding that several of the invited had called to say that if the tree were based on the current Dino Di Laurentiis remake of the 1933 monster classic and framed with the towers, they were not coming.

"Our King Kong is a takeoff on the original and the building had to be the original one that the real King Kong fled to," he said.

Miss Sky and Suzan investigated gingerbread recipes for the Art Deco airplanes and the gorilla cookies be-fore they baked. And Michelle Stona poured over her Gournet Cookbook determined to steal enough ideas to devise a proper Fay Wray punch. Sha came away with three: one was laced with applejack; a second was a mix-ture of hot wines and the third, which was as pale as the bleached-blond beroine, tasted very much like eggnog.

· A Broken Facade

"I've got such a passion for King Kong," Suzan said to guests at the party: "I have this King Kong book The Girl and the Heiry Paw' and I've read it a dozen times. The films? I have seen the original And from what I've heard, I don't think the new one

Her father had his own reason why the remake might not be as satisfying as the earlier version. The first inspira-tion for anything has something that all those that follow cannot possibly match," he said.

James S. Rossant, the architect, characterized King Kong as a "super fig-ure," an "epic ape" because, he said, we are overwhelmed by Manhattan but he was not. "King Kong was able to scale buildings that confound us," he said. "How can people grasp the en-tirety of the Empire State Building or the World Trade Center?"

There was talk of the new King Kong candy bar that is all chocolate and peanuts, and someone mentioned the feats in baseball of Charley (King Kong) Keller. Natvar Bhavsar, a painter, said he had never liked King Kong and lately, after hearing about what some view as racist overtones, he knew the reason

"It was the spin-offs that interest me," John Margolies, an architectural writer, said. "People love to celebrate something and they do so with spin-offs. It's what they selebrate — apes and such — that proves revealing and remarkable."

But the children at the party had quite different interpretations. Most, but not all are avid fans. Gian Marco, Tanya Balsley, 9, a taller and bolder admirer, swooned even when abe spoke of ber affection for the beast. "I'm two seconds with him and I-ooch," she mosned, her large eyes flut-

A Program for Men Facing the Traumas Of Marriage's End

SCARSDALE, N. Y., Dec. 28-The breakup of marriage is often depicted as a traumatic experience for the wife and as a release for the husband, who supposedly longs for the freedom of his bachelor days.

But sitting in at meeting nr twn of For Men Only at the Y.M. & Y.W.H.A. of Mid-Westchester quickly dispels that

Some of those attending the program, most of whom are divorced or separated, have tried the singles bars and the nightlife, but that palled-soon for some and later for others. And the breakup of their marriages was for many a frustrating and sad experience that left them with feelings of bitterness and failure.

Instead of welcoming their new freedom, many have found it difficult to readjust to the life of a single man. The friends they made in marriage have drifted away, and they have had to find new ones. They worry about their children and their new roles as part-

The basic problems were identified as loneliness, child custody and guilt.

For Men Only has attracted 20 men, including a couple of widowers and one bachelor, and its regular members are mostly middle-class suburbanitesbusinessmen, salesmen, shopkeepers,

They pay $10 for the program and chip in a few dollars for refreshments. Divorced and separated women join the group once a month to discuss their problems and attend parties that are held at the men's homes on Friday eve-

The program was established a year ago after a member of the Y told Alice Vesey, its director of adult education, that the Y should do something about the plight of divorced men. He noted the Y had a program for divorced women and said "I'm jealous."

After much discussion, Mrs. Vesey said, they concluded few men were pre pared for the emotional upheavals that follow divorce. The basic problems were identified as looeliness, concern over the father's relations with his children, who usually end up in their mother's custody, and feelings of depression, guilt and self-doubt.

"There Is a New Trend"

The wives of most of the men in the group had left them. Some of the wives sought independence, some had apparently tired of marriage, and several men conceded that there was a lack of communication, that the marriages weren't working out.

"There is a new trend and women's outlook is different," one member said. "Women want to make their mark in life," another added. "They are tired of being tied down and they want to be more than sex objects." Several of the men said that they were leading active social lives and had not joined out of louliness. Rether, they were seeking men with similar probiems and they wanted to explore the possibility of forming an organization to seek reform of a judicial system that, in the words of one, "takes our children from us" and, as another put it, "doesn't give us a fair shake in

But several others said they had not retained any friends from their married lives and one said that he was "tired of looking at the four walls" when he "Usually in marriage, the wife tends to set the social pattern and the busband becomes friendly with the husbands of his wife's friends," one men explained. "A lot of us had to establish a totally new social life.

The New Social Life

For the group, that new social lifa would include an ice skating party with their children, a weekend in the Catskills, a party with dates and an excursion to a hockey game at Madison Souare Garden.

One of the major problems mentioned was the role of part-time father with visitation rights.

"You're no longer a father figure, more a playmate than a parent," one said. "The father and his children are under a deep emotional strain and it takes time to adjust."

Another, whose wife had remarried, confessed that he was bothered when his young son called his stepfather "Dad" but said that he had learned to accept it.

He described his relationship with his .son as extremely close and attributed this to the "fact that I pay a great deal of attention to him."

During a roundtable discussion the other night in the warm, dark-paneled Y library, the men were asked how they bad adjusted to the breakup of their marriages, One, divorced six years, said that he had "run around every night" the first few years but now, "I just want a peaceful existence."

How they Adjusted.

Another said that he had done "a fair share of running around" but was now interested in the group and in spending more time with his children. he "ran seven nights a week" but lately was spending time alone and liking it.

There was an undercurrent of bitterness in the conversations. "The anger never leaves you," one participant said.
"It diminishes but it never goes away." And another observed that "time is great therapy-it takes time to sort, things out.

On the subject of remarriage, the fear of "another mistake" was frequently expressed.

"I think we fear duplicating the same-experience," one group member said.
"A certain magnetism draws you to a person and we have a tendency to gravitate in the same direction."
"I think it is fear of yourself," was another assessment. "You made a decision with certainty, based on emotional, intellectual and physical factors, and you fear you may go wrong again."
But the member who said he was tired of looking at the four walls conceded that he would remarry if harcould find "the right person" and some; of his fellows nodded in agreement.
A widower said, "Very honestly, there is the possibility of a good marriage. Mine was."

apogal to The New York Times HUNTER, N.Y., Dec. 29 — Freestyle skiing has come a long way since such internationalists as Stein Ericksen, Herman Goellner and Arthur Furrer used to do somersaults off bumps at Sugar-bush, Killington and Bolton Valley, re-spectively. In those days,

News about 10 years ago, flipping on skis was an oddity. To-day, freestyling pros are doing everything from his moebius flip ta full twisting hack layout) to double and triple believed on the state of heliocoptors (airborne vertical revolu-tions with the body). Such potentially dangerous routines have caused ski-area operators across the Uniited States to do months of re-evaluating. "As it is, normal skiing presents an element of risk." Or ille Slutzky, manager of Hunter Mountain, said today, "This is true, in particular, for those who are careless. We feel that we should discourage skiers from practicing hairy routines—those inverted maneuvers. As a result we, as have lots of other ski-area owners, have placed a Slutzky, however, explained he felt skiing's entrepreneurs generally were in favor of the ballet-type skiing as a new and safe challenge for people of all ages. As a result, he is fostering a freestyle camp which today was in its fourth session. Dozens of similar camps are being conducted during this holiday week across the nation.

Barclay Moore, who was naloed head freestyle coach at Hunter, has been in charge of the training at this northern Catskill resort. The camp has attracted 32 students. They range in age from a 10-year-old to a gray-haired teamster union official who is in his early 50's. Students are paying $60 each to par-realized how involved a game plan is."

"It does get involved," Ewbank agreed, "We don't just throw the ball up and listen for the thud." When the Jets won Super Bowl III, the A.F.L. had instant stature. When the National Football League owners met that spring to discuss realignment for 1970, the first season of the merger, Phil Iselin was among the loudest voices for the preservation of the 10 A.F.L. teams in the same conference, which also would include three established

N.F.L. teams. Those voices prevailed. But in the seasons that followed the Jets decayed. Over the last seven years, they have not had a winning season. Now they are without a president and a coach.

Walt Michaels Looms as Coach

Perhaps the Super Bowl victory had made winning seem too easy. Perhaps the other owners and Phil Iselin thought that Weeb Ewhank somehow would find a way to win, that Weeb Ewbenk could not make a mistake. But four years ago, when he announced his retirement as coach, Weeb Ewbank ushered in his son-in-law, Charley Winner, as his successor, with the owners' approval. Walt Michaels, who had been the Jets' defensive coach for 10 years, deserved the job that Charley Winner got. Now, ironically, with Winner's having been discharged during the disastrous 1975 season and with Lou Holtz's resignation late in the recent rebuilding season, Walt Michaels is understood to be the owners' choice as the new coach unless Vince Lombardi or Koute Rockne parachutes out of the sky.

But, with Phil Iselin dead, the future of the Jets' owner-

Phil Iselin had only about 17 percent of the Jets' stock. Townsend Martin and Heien Dillon, the daughter of Don Lillis, each has 25 percent. The largest stockholder is Leon Hess, the wealthy oilman, with about 33 percent. Up to now, Leon Hess has never had the time or the inclination to devote himself to the Jets operation. Perhaps he will now. He did attend N.F.L. meetings thiring Phil Iselin's absence after the September heart attack. But if Leon Hess is not interested, Helen Dillon might emerge as the N.F.L.'s only female president, with Al Ward, the general manager, assuming more authority. Another possibility is that Phil Iselin's death will persuade the other owners to sell after nearly a decade of playing with a broken toy. When the season ended, Joe Namath was asked what he would do if he were a part of the Jets' management.

"I'd try to find somebody," the quarterback said firmly, "to buy the club." Not many peopla know it, but Joe Namath's secret McVay said a decision on whether or not he would have a defensive coordi-nator would be made after the line coach is named. If there is a coordina-tor, he said, he would be one of the three defensive coaches.

The new offensive coordinator, Gibson, said the unsettled situation in De-troit, where the Lions' owner, William Clay Ford, had told the assistant coaches they were free to look for other jobs, did not influence his decision. "I would've come here [to the Giants] anyway," said Gibson by phone from ni, where he will scout the Orange Bowl game. "I have a great deal of respect for John McVay and Jay Fry."-

Gibson, 49 years nid, spent nine sea-sons as an assistant coach at Bowling Green before becoming head coach there for three years. He coached in the Canadian Football League for five seasons and worked for McVay at Memphis in 1974. The following year, the W.F.L.'s last, he took the head

Nets Bow to Sonics, 102-96, As Brown and Watts Excel

UNIONDALE, L.I., Dec. 29—Fred Brown, who looks sleepy, and Stick Watts, who looks innocent, stole a game for the Seattle SuperSonics against the Nets last night at the Nasbalf deficit and prevailed, 102-96.

Watts, who wears a Seattle-green headband perched on his shaved head, provided the key play of the last two minutes, stealing an inbound pass from Nate Archibald and sinking a break-awey layup to put the game out of reach. Before Brown's off-balance shooting and Watt's steal, the Nets had led by 4 points with three minutes left in the game.

Loss Is Deserved, Loughery Says Predictably, Kevin Loughery, the New York coach, was less than pleased with his team's performance.

"We played just fike we should have got beat," he said. "We deserved it. We kept turning the ball over needlessly, and when you do that you're in trouof the players' way," he said. "I told Slick to go out there and steal the ball and make the layup and put the game away."

Russell said the trade of Nick Weatherspoor to Seettle from Washington for Leonard Gray two weeks ago provided an indirect benefit to the team.

"It was a blessing," the coach said.
"We had to teach him the offense, so it was like a refresher course for the whole team."

Russell said the team had two offenses, one modeled on Boston's and one devised by his assistant coach, Bob Hopkins. The "Boston" offense is more deliberate, involving patterns and pre-selected shooters, while the other con-sists of cutting inside to the basket and finding the open man.

"I know the Boston system," the former Celtic center said, "I hate to admit it, but my assistant's offense is better than mine."

The crowd of 6,863 for this National Basketball Association game reserved much of its cheering for the appearance in the second half of Bob Love, one of the newer Nets. Love, meshing well with Archibeld's passes, put in 12 points in 17 minutes of play.

The Nets' troubles were complicated by a lack of centers. Kim Hughes, the starter, committed four fouls in the firs five minutes, and Jim Fox, his replecment, could play only 13 minutes. Fox has been troubled by weakness and a hart irregularity. He consulted with a cardiologist by telephone after the

The Nets put together a distinguished first quarter and a disastrons second quarter and trailed, 50-46, at the half. In the first 12 minutes the Nets, who have by far the lowes! number of assists in the N.B.A., seemed to have discovered a new weapon—the pass. John Williamson, who is averaging two assists a game, had three in the first

A Reversal in Second Quarter

Most teams now try to shut down the middle egainst Archibald's penetra-tion, and Seattle was nn exception. Against that tactic, the Nets sent their rwards outside, and Jan van Breda Kolff and Tim Bassett were converting the shots from the corners. At one point in the first quarter, the Nets led by 17, and their sticky defense was hampering Seattle's inside game at the other end of the court.

The second quarter was a complete reversal. The Net shooters' shots stopped falling, end the passers stopped passing. Led by Brown Miles

Manhattan, Purdue Gain Festival Final

By SAM GOLDAPER

Darryl Eady, Dino Larry and 32 free throws put Manhattan College into the final round of the Holiday Festival basketball tournament last night be-fore a disappointing Madison Square. Garden crowd of 7,102.

The only two freshmen on the roster accounted for 27 points as the Jaspers upset Penn, 68-61. They did well at the free-throw line, especially in the second half. Their 32 free throws came in 39 attempts, including 24 of 26 in the second half. The last 13 Manhattan points in the final 4 minutes 25 seconds were on free throws.

in the other semifinal, Purdue jump-ed out to a 17-point halftime lead and went on to overwhelm Georgetown, the pretournament favorite, 83-65, Manhat-tan and Purdue, which won its fifth game in eight, will play tonight for the

In the game for fifth place, three free throws by Kim Malcolm gave Long Island University a 64-61 victory over

The 6-foot-6-inch Bady, sout of Merist. High School, Bayonne, N. J., was not a household name among college recruiters. By Eady's own admission, "I wasn't a very good high school player, only good enough for a second-team spot on the Hodson County All-Star team."
But the way Eady shot the ball and hit the boards last night, he may be a find for Manhattan. In his first start, he scored 16 points and had a team high of seven rebounds. Before last night he had averaged 3.5 points for the six games, four of which the Jaspers had lost.

Zone Defense Fails Penn

The 6-5 Larry, his real first name is Levurtus, was recruited out of Poughkeepsie (N.Y.) High. He collected 11 points, but more importantly played a key role in the 3-2 zone defense the Jaspers threw at Penn early in the second half. It failed the Penn running game, forcing the Quakers to shoot from the outside and foul excessively. Manhattan went into the zone after Keven McDonald, Penn's too scorer with a average, picked up his fourth foul. The Quakers were ahead, 42-39, at the time.

"We had to go to the zone," said Jack Pewers, the Manhattan coach. "We were in foul trouble and we had only seven men. The guys told me during the timeout they were a little tired. I would have to say that switching to the zone was the key to the victory. It upset the tempo of their game."

Powers had revamped his starting incup because 0 an injury to Mike Bruno, his 6-9 center, who suffered n injured thumb of his left had in Tuesday's practice.

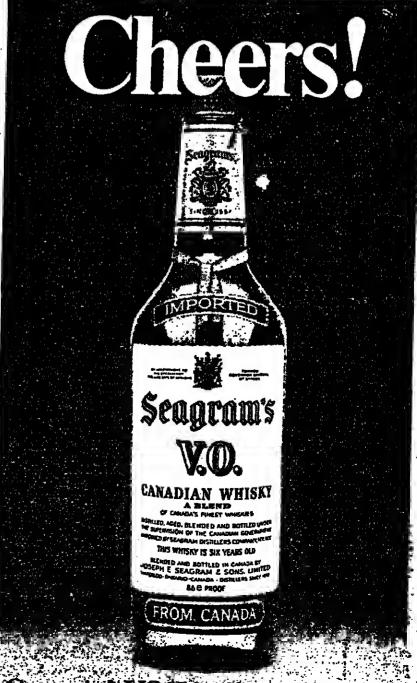

Steve Grant, who finished with 18 points, moved to center. Dick Pope, because of his defensive skills, and Eady played at forward and Larry and Ricky Marsh made up the backcourt. The move sent Tom Courtney, the 5-11 backcourt man, to the bench. Courtney later played a key role in the zone and getting the ball to Grant and Eady.

Pope, whose forte is defense, was matched with McDonald, the Eastern College Athletic Conference sophomore of the year, last season. The 6-4 Pope did the defensive jo basked of him. He

The agents are swarming about the athletes. "My phone," said Green, "is jumpion off the wall. I've been getting 10 to 15 calls a day from agents. High Tides Around New York

Majors Plays Quick-Change Artist at Sugar Bowl

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr. pecial to The New York Times

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29-Johnny Majors, who has three days to go as the University of Pittsburgh head foot-ball coach, returned to the scene of his best known mistake and found himself the center of a social-professinoal situation that he admitted was "a little bit bizarre."

Majors's primary task here is to coach his undefeated Pitt team in the Sugar Bowl game against Georgia on Saturday, in hopes that the Panthers, ranked No. 1 in the netion, finish as the unofficial 1976 national champions. Then on Sunday, Majors will become the head coach at the University of Tennessee, his alma mater

However, Majors finds himself in the company of both Pittsburgh and Ten-nessee officials now and then et the many social functions that always fill the week prior to a bowl game such as this one. The Pitt representatives are here for obvious reasons. The Ten nessee folks are on hand along with representatives of all 10 Southeastern S.E.C. is now under contract with the Sugar Bowl to send its league champion to the Sugar Bowl. Georgia is the first S.E.C. champion to make the Sugar Bowl under this three-year pact. Conference executives flock to such affairs on "official business."

Majors may be the only coach able to pull this one off for a week without a major faux pas. It must be something like being at a party with your wife and "the other woman." So far Majors has said "we" when he means Pittsburgh and "they" when he talks of Tennessee. That's not easy. But then Majors never let a little thing like a key fumble in e Sugar Bowl game ruin his outlook on life either. Sour Memories of Sugar Bowl

This strange setting marks the first time the 42-year-old Majors has re-turned for a Sugar Bowl game since he played in the Jan. 1, 1957 contest as an all-America back et Tennessee. Baylor beat the Vols, 13-7, in thet game with a fourth-period touchdown that was made possible when Majors dropped a punt at the Tennessee 15 and Baylor recovered. Majors jokes about that fumble now. He's not making jokes about the current problem he has, but he may in time. The Pitt and Georgia players were feted last night at a dinner attended by all those persons interested in Majors's past, present and future, Thus Dr. Wesley Posvar, chanceltor of the University of Pittsburgh, was on hand, along with Dr. Earl Ramer, faculty adviser for athletics at the University of Tennessee. Both athletic directors were on band, also—Bob Woodruff of Tennessee end Casimir J. Myslinski.

Unruffled by the whole thing, Postar said after the dinner, "I'll have to say this is an unprecedented situation. In fact, it's bizarre."

Majors agreed with his corrent chancellor when he said, "Yes, it's a little bizarre."

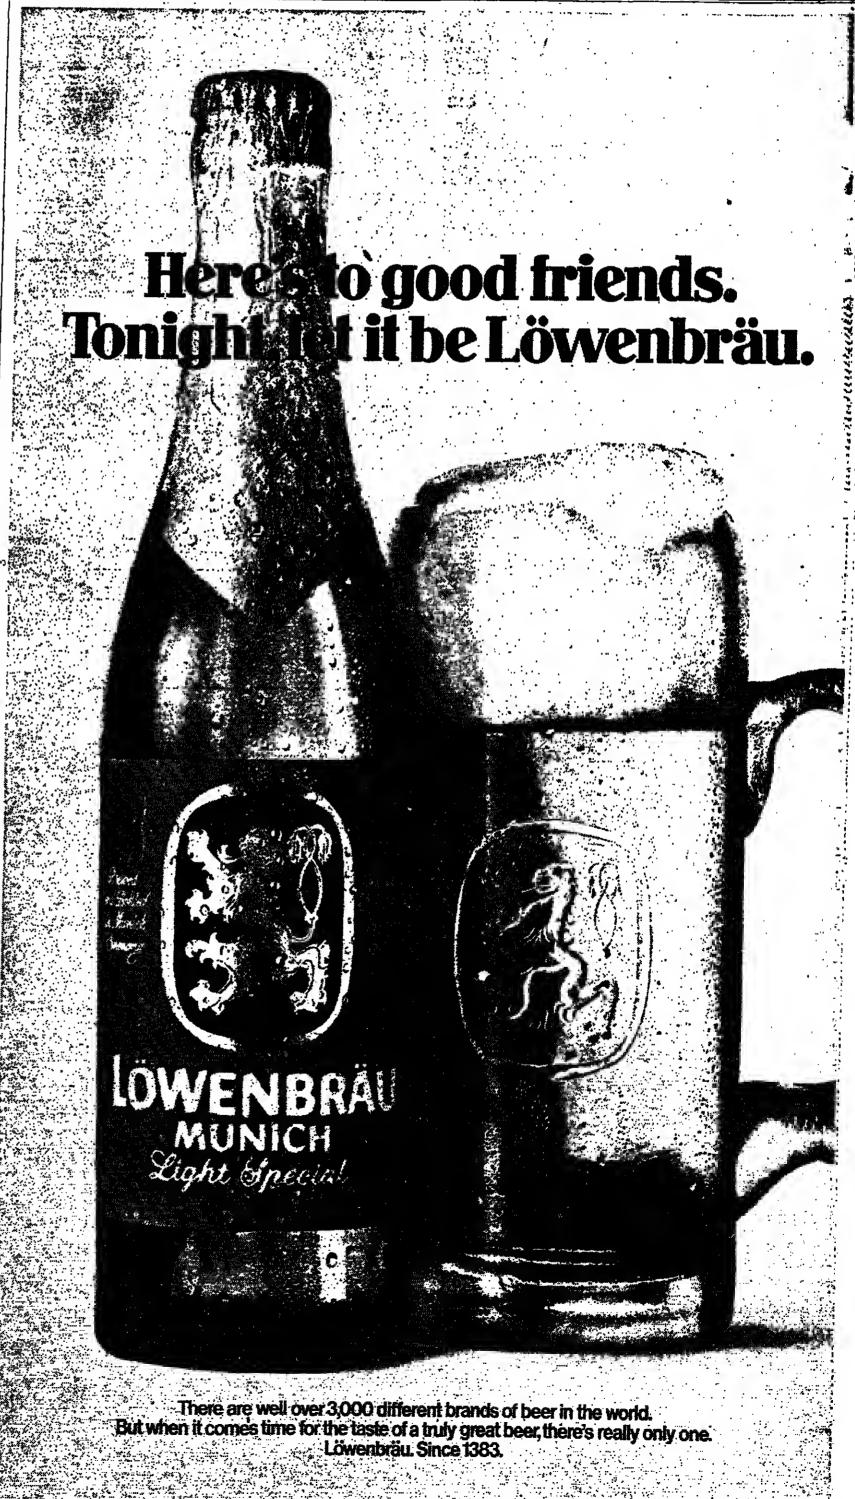

The Game Is the Thing Then Majors said, "But it's better for the team that it's all settled. The got this all out of the way, settled end so everyone understands where things are. After the game it'll be time for me to hit the road." Majors officially accepted the Tel nessee job six days after Pitt beat Penn State, 24-7, in the regular-season final that gave the Panthers their curren record of 11-0. The acceptance ended

The Last Calls to Alex Rose

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

As Alex Rose lay dying Monday night, his secretary of 25 years, Flor-ence Erdel, visited his bedside, not for a sad farewell, but to bring him up to date on who called that day and what they wanted. This was the essential Alex Rose: tracking his communicants to the end, studying the thoughts and people of politics that clustered to him each day as if the telephone itself were

Although he could not speak because of an oxygen mask, Mr. Rose listened carefully and nodded, Mrs. Erdel said, as she recited the list of people and problems that would be the wise elder's final updating on his world of politics—a world of eccentric joy and despair and power, a world of high strategy and plodding detail never more mudane and precious as at the time of departure.

"We had kept the seriousness of his illness a secret," Mrs. Erdel said. "But Sunday there finally was a political story about it in the newspaper, and I had to read it to him." He was annoyed that the word had gone beyond the relentless rumor stage of politics, she

As a creator and ruler of the mar-ginal yet highly successful Liberal Party, Mr. Rose knew that power was stance, and he had been remarkably successful in bolding off from public sight this final shadow on his reign.

Politicians have a special kind of mortality. There is the universal sort that has now taken Mr. Rose, but there are all the earlier rehearsals of political are all the earner releasants of policies in which a combatant can be pronounced dead by his peers and the public after coming in second with a strategy he risked.

Thus, while politicisms admired Mr. Rose's strategizing in behalf of the classic "antiboss" campaign of then Mayor Robert F. West's lead of the beart jack rode around to the queen, and the spade ace was cashed. Rhung was not surprised to find all the missing trumps on his left, and had some thinking to do. The routine move was to continue trumps, but that would have given West a chance for brilliant defense. VOYAGE. By Sterling Hayden. 700 pages.

Sterling Hayden's "Voyage" is the sort of book some critic is certain to call a "blockbuster," hut I believe that this particular block has already been busted beyond repair. "Epic" novels of the sea are generally foul weather in fiction, and "Voyage" is out responsive to the helm. I always liked Mr. Hayden as an understated actor, but as a writer he is a terrible ham.

This is a book with a cast of thousands. They come at you so thick and fast that it is a mnemonic feat simply to remember them. Some appear for a few pages only to disappear forever into the enormous bulk of the book. It seems to me that there are several key characters who are 6 feet 5 inches, and the bulk of the male cest are respectively. the bulk of the male cast are sexually either monstrously over- or under-en-dowed. To my way of thinking, a quan-titative approach to the subject of sexuality is almost infallibly the sign of a bad book.

Neither Normal nor Ordinary

"Voyage" opens with a rather ama-teurish synopsislike introduction to its people. The "robber baron" who owns the ships strides up and down in ex-pensively furnished rooms, gesticulating with a cigar, and saying vapid things. The sailors who are nis "slaves" seem to be bent, almost to a man, on securing some unsavory form of sexual satisfaction. No one is doing anything oormal or ordinary—one more nega-tive sign, in my experience.

"Rabelaisian" is another adjective

"Rabelaisian" is another adjective that will be invoked to praise "Voy-age" and here I would like to set the record straight: Rabelais was one of the intellectual giants of his time and a mysogynist besides. Women are used in his books only for satirical or rhetorical purposes. His language was not "rollicking," whatever that word may mean as it is most often employed, but learned and peppered with neologisms.
in short. Mr. Hayden's novel is oo more Rabelaisian than it is epic.

"Voyage" is a rudderless ship whose scuppers are awash with sociological scuppers are awash with sociological sloshings, with brave seamen, cruel, cowardly officers and insatiable owners. Mr. Hayden is writing a "protest" novel among other things, and when Neptune's Car—the ship making this voyage—lies becalmed off South America, it is because the winds of progress are not blowing. True to the cinematic stereotype, the men philosophyse in the stereotype, the men philosophize in the forecastle and are denied a hearing on the bridge.

Mr. Hayden knows formathing chort ships and has a decent eye for description. He can write a graceful sentence now and then, but his dialogue could only be spoken by character actors of the 30's and 40's. There is a delicate fellow named MacLeod whose lines could oot be made acceptable even by the young Leslie Howard. Among the crew, we have a one-legged poet, an elderly voyeur, a Douglas Fairbanks Sr. daredevil and a horde of anonymous

"Voyage" tells the story of the first iron windjammer to sail out of Moohegan. In an attempt at counterpoint that is beavier than Neptune's Car it-self, Mr. Hayden drops another ship ioto the water-the luxurious yacht Atalanta—where we find the shipowner's daughter and her party. Like the captain of Neptune's Car, she writes letters home, chronicling the pregnant differences between the two passages.

differences between the two passages. Violence is Mr. Hayden's idea of vivid writing: A googed-out eye lying on the deck, a man's spine cracking as the brutal mate forces aim to carry an anvil. There is enough drinking in "Voyage" to sink both windjammer and yacht and many a coy reflection on Victorian sexual inhibition by one of the beautiful young women aboard the Atalanta. When she is not sizing up men, she is measuring mores. up men, she is measuring mores.

Warren of Incidents

"Voyage" is exactly 700 pages, just about the length of "The Magic Moun-tain," or "Crime and Punishment," but, unlike them, it seems interminable bacause its structure does not organize or support the material. While the other two have the unified complexity of great cathedrals, "Voyage" resem-bles a rabbit warren of incident piled upoo incident, a surfeit of violeoce and pseudo-intensity tossed together like a salad. The very thickness of the book will nevertheless be regarded as a virtue. In such novels, length is seen as a function of the author's potency, his "imaginative hreadth," his "inexhaustible invention," his "passion," his "panoramic eye." If he cannot with over the reader by craft he will wear him down by attrition. Like the rapa-cious shipowners he describes, Mr. Hayden grossly overloads his vessel.

But with all its faults, many readers will love "Voyage" still. The ocean is so rich le connotation, don't you find? And a ship, so fragile, you know, like a human being afloat on "the destructive element." Why, those very Yale heys who called "Moby Dick" one of the "10 most books" will must the "10 most boring books" will run out and huy "Voyage" the very day it is published.

A New Beginning: Foreign Policy.

Jimmy Carter will inherit a world situation not free of crisis but one that is not likely to demand immediate agonizing decisions-no burgeoning Vietnam war, no ongoing Bay of Pigs invasion scheme, no Berlin blockade. Intractable problems fester oo several continents and some will demand action by the United States; but with luck, Mr. Carter will have time to play himself gradually into his self-appointed role as "the spokesman for the nation in the area of foreign affairs."

Successful foreign policy begins at bome and the President-elect has often demonstrated that he is aware of this. His choice of Cyrus R. Vance to be Secretary of State surely means an end to "lone ranger" diplomacy and the restoration of collectivity to the shaping of this country's actions abroad. This means again utilizing to the fullest the expertise and energies of the State Department and Foreign Service, which atrophied under Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

As Mr. Carter has emphasized, it also means Presidential vigilance to insure better cooperation and coordination from those Executive departments-Agriculture. Commerce, Treasury, even Justice-whose actions often affect the State Department's administration of foreign policy. It also means the rebuilding of a vital partnership with the Congress and regaining, through greater openness and candor, the confidence and support of the American people for foreign pobcy initiatives.

. Barring some unanticipated explosion, Messrs. Carter and Vance will have time to rebuild a structured, collective responsibility for foreign policy, drawing on all available expertise and talent. Nothing they could do in meir first weeks of affice would be more likely to pay long-run dividends for stability, world order and effective crisis management, should it become occessary.

Given his own evident passioo for halting the arms race and the well-timed appeal from Leonld L Brezhnev · for restarting the strategic arms limitation talks, Mr. Carter may be tempted by the prospect of an early meeting with the Soviet leader. And given the improving climate for Middle East negotiations, coupled with the undoubted fact that time for a settlement there is slowly running nut, the new President will understandably give urgent attention to that most dangerous of all world problems. In this vital area, which Secretary Kissinger through the most painstaking and skillful negotiations has led nearer to peace than it has been in years, Mr. Carter should lose no time lo building an these

In nearly all of his statements on foreign policy, Mr. Carter emphasized priority for rejuvenating this country's major alliances-for perfecting "a partnership between North America, Western Europe and Japan," as he said at the Foreign Policy Association in New York last

It is a wise priority. President Ford and Secretary Kissinger have mended fences with the NATO partners and Japan since inter-allied relationships sank to a dangerous low in a miasma of distrust and backbiting after the Arab-Israeli war of 1973. But the processes of coosultation could still be greatly refined with "continuing contacts at all levels," as Mr. Carter has said. And as be also recognized, "to the maximum extent possible," American dealings with the Communist powers "should reflect the combined view of the democracies, and thereby avoid suspicions by our allies that we may be disregarding their interests."

Closest possible cooperation with the European allies and Japan is essential in order to avoid serious economic difficulties with the European Community, improve the conditions of international trade, cope with such common. problems as inflatinn and energy shortages, and fashion a more constructive response to the increasingly strident demands of the poorer nations for a greater share of the world's bounty.

In Asia, free of the terrible burden of the Vietnam war, and with relations with Japan on the upgrade, the Carter Administration ought to be able gradually to make cootact with the new regimes of Indochina, expand relations with China without sacrificing the independence of Taiwan, and strive for bealthier, less-dependent relationships with South Korea and the Philippines.

In Africa, the Administration must persevere with the praiseworthy but very belated effort of its predecessor to help bring a peaceful transition to majority rule in Rhodesia and the transfer of cootrol from South Africa. to a majority Government in Namibia, elected under United Nations supervision,

In this hemisphere, there is one clear priority. It is certain to become urgent, even critical, during 1977. It is a new treaty that will insure unrestricted access to the Panama Canal and a United States share in its defense while conferring sovereignty over the Canal Zone itself to the Republic of Panama.

This will require Mr. Carter to recast some of his campaign statements on this emotive issue. But without a new treaty that will remove a symbol-odious in all of Latin America-of an outdated colonial relationship, the Administration cannot bope to have an effective policy for the Americas.

and the Defense Budget

During the campaign, President-elect Carter seemed to indicate that his intention was not to reduce military spending but only the rate of growth. Even this will not be easily done, as Defense Secretary-designate Harold Brown has now affirmed, Any proposed cutback undoubtedly will run into resistance from the military-industrial-Congressional complex, reinforced by upward revisions recently in intelligence estimates of the Soviet Union's capabilities and intentions. It is vital, nevertheless, to recognize that the problem is political more than military. The natioo's military capability could be maintained and even improved at significantly lower cost. The catalogue of potential savings is long. .

The overriding factor, however, is psychological—the world's perception of America's strength and the status of East-West détente. If the climate of Soviet-American relations deteriorates and there is a breakdown in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT II) with Moscow, Mr. Carter is more likely to prepare a higher than a lower defense budget next fall. But if a SALT II treaty is completed, the atmosphere will favor some downward revisions of defense spending particularly in the Ford Administration's stepped-up strategic arms budget.

Mr. Carter, for example, has spoken out against current preparation for fighting a limited strategic nuclear war and has committed himself to a return to the earlier strategy of deterrence. New programs designed to produce destabilizing "first-strike" weapons undoubtedly will be re-examined. That could bring delay, if not susension, of the Ford Administration's program to develop a big, new, highly accurate replacement for Minuteman intercontinental missiles, the MX, which would cost $30 billion over ten years.

Apart from such revisions of strategy, the three chief areas where savings can be made, according to The Brookings Institution's annual defense studies, are pay scales, the high ratio of support to combat manpower and the increasing cost and sophistication-often unneeded-of new generations of weapons.

Payment of civilian wages to soldiers, high pensions and other emoluments introduced to prepare for a draftfree army have lifted manpower costs to one-half or more of the defense budget. If military pay had increased since 1968 by no more than the average rise in the private sector, last year's defense budget would have been $7 billion lower. Even so, the forces have been reduced by aknost 600,000 meo, a 22 percent cut below the pre-Viet-

From the peak of the Vietnam war in 1968 to 1975. military manpower declined by 40 percent; civilian support for the men in uniform declined only 23 percent, Brookings found. The oumber of Navy ships declined 50 percent; the number of people in Navy uniforms was down only 30 perceot.

The biggest waste in the armed forces is the profligate use of manpower, a legacy from the era when manpower was cheap. The ratio of students to instructors and support personnel in military training schools is 1.5 to 1; civilian colleges run at a 15-to-1 ratio. A 2-to-1 studentto-teacher ratio in military schools would save 40,000 people. The Brookings study indicated that such reforms in support overhead could reduce the oumber of Defense Department employees by 200,000 over a four-year period, saving $3 billion a year by 1980.

Nuclear submarines are an extraordinary advance in military technology; they can stay submerged for long periods and cover vast distances without refueling. But the nuclear aircraft carrier and cruiser are anomalies. Unlike the submarine, which travels alone, the carrier task force requires many conventionally-powered warships and supply vessels and little is gained from the carrier's ouclear propulsion. Yet construction of another nuclear super-carrier at a cost of $2 billion plus $4 billion for its double complement of aircraft—is getting under way as a result of a Congressional vote stirred up by Mr. Carter's old mentor, Adm. Hyman G.

The Congressional Budget Office has just questioned the validity of the assumptions that underlie the Navy's carrier-centered structure. There is doubt that carrier attack against the Soviet bomeland and its land-based aircraft and missiles would be profitable or even feasible. A shift in Naval emphasis to controlling the sealanes against Soviet submarines, the chief Soviet' naval threat, could save $7 billion over five years.

Construction of 244 B-1 strategic bombers, designed to penetrate Soviet air defenses at a cost of $94 million per plane, is getting under way. Mr. Carter will have to move fast if vast sums are not to be wasted. A saving of $10 to $15 billion over the next decade could be made, according to a Brookings study, by substituting cheaper stand-off bombers equipped with long-range cruise missiles.

There are other savings that could be made. Scores of military bases are kept going for local employment and Congressional backscratching, rather than military reasons. National Guard and other reserve units are maintained on Congressinnal insistence for political reasons, although most could not be readied in time to get to Europe for the relatively short, intensive conflict that is expected there if war should come.

All in all, a start now io trimming back programs of this kind could reduce defense spending projected for 1980 by $12 to $15 billion a year, Brookings' studies indicate, without reducing the ability of the United States to meet its military commitments abroad. A selection of cuts totaling $5 to $7 billion, therefore, is clearly feasible militarily. Whether Mr. Carter can marshal the political skill and support to carry out his pledge is the only question posed.

The above are the eighth and ninth in a series of yearend editorials, appearing this week through Dec. 31, examining some of the most urgent problems and issues that face the new Carter Administration and the American people during the coming year.

Coping With Massive Oil Spills.

To the Editor:

The massive oil spill from the grounding and the breakup of the tanker Argo Merchant provides another grim example of the lack of competence in and regulation of merchant marine activities. That the ship 'nwpers' U.S. representative himself attributes the vessel's grounding to "erratic currents" merely underlines the fact that many ships are captained, navigated and manned by less than tem, the Malta center is now in operacompetent personnel.

. Almost any blue-water sailor will attest that merchant ships frequently appear cruising along with no one awake at the helm.

As a partial solution to this problem, I propose strict licensing requirements for any commercial vessel operating in U.S. territorial waters to protect oot only our marine and shore environments but also the privately owned boats which are from time to time run over by the careless masters in merchant shipping. If this measure is insufficient, perhaps a "control tower" system for shipping similar to the radar tracking and control exercised over aviation at our major airports could limit the damage brought about by those with little regard for lives

JOHN P. MCWILLIAMS JR. Tuxedo Park, N.Y., Dec. 22, 1976

To the Editor:

Early on the morning of Dec. 15, the Liberian-flag tanker Argo Merchant ran aground about 27 miles southeast nf Nantucket Island. The tanker broke apart, spilling all of her cargo of heavy No. 6 industrial oil into the sea, covering an area about 95 miles by 30 miles and endangering one of the prime spawning grounds for bottom fish to be found at the Georges Bank location. In contrast to this disaster, on Dec. 11, a center.aimed at helping Mediterranean coastal states to keep their basin free of oil pollution was npened by the President of the newly-born Republic of Malta, Sir Anthony Mamo, at Manoel Island, This, I believe, is the first center of its kind in the world

'High Trust' for Generals To the Editor:

I'll leave it to nthers to expose the wrongheadedness of General Westmoreland's views on Vietnam and amnesty [Op-Ed Dec. 12]. There is one thing, bowever, about which he is dead right. The military is ranked in the "high-trust" category. In a recent survey of adults in the greater New Haven metropolitan area, I included questions that measured alienation from social and cultural institutions. Included were mass media auch as radio and TV, major spectator sports, occupation and economy, politics and government, "popular" music, educatinnal and religious institutions, and the armed forces. Overwhelmingly, respondents are not alienated from the armed forces. In fact, the military is ranked second only to occupation in favorable responses. On the contrary, the public is most alienated from politics and government, schools, and popular music. Although one wonders whether or not such trust and identification ere well placed, the American public's judgment is clear. It is politicians and educators who are out of step, not the generals.

Combating Police-State Tendencies

By Devid Wise

WASHINGTON - The coming to power of an elected President with a Congress controlled by his own political party offers an unparalleled opportunity to bring an end to lawbreaking by the intelligence and police agencies of the Federal Government.

For some four decades, a period spanning seven Administrations, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other Government intelligence agencies have broken the law and violated the Constitution—secretly, out of view of the governed, often under cover of night. The statistics are breatstaking: 28 million letters screened by the C.LA. and hundreds of thousands opened; millions of cables read and copied by the National Security Agency in Operation Shamrock: 300,000 names in the "Hydra" computer used in Op-eration CHAOS, the C.I.A. domesticspying program; 465,000 names in the intelligence files of the Internal Revenue Service; 10,665 F.B.I. "na-tional security" wiretaps and bugs over a 25-year period, and hundreds of F.B.I. burglaries. The law-breaking. in short, has become institutionalized We should not assume that the abuses have ended because of publicity. On July 7, three days after the nation celebrated its Bicentennial, Timothy J. Redfearn, who received $400 a month from the F.B.I. as an informant, broke into the offices of the Socialist Workers Party in Denver. He stole files and within hours showed them to his case officer, an

F.B.I. agent in the Denver office: Both President-elect Carter and Vice President-elect Mondale, who was a member of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, have voiced their concern over intelligence abuses. On the other hand, once Presidents move into the White House, they tend to view the C.L.A., the F.B.L., the eavesdropping N.S.A., and the other intelligence and police agencies as extensions of their power.

Yet if Mr. Carter and the 95th Congress want to do so, they can take specific steps to begin the process of controlling intelligence. The National Security Act of 1947 should be amended or replaced to prohibit the C.LA. from engaging in covert operations abroad in peacetime. There is no specific authority in the law for such operations. Americans are unhappy if the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, which is closely modeled on its namesake in Langley, Va., pays off members of Congress in this country; that is precisely the sort of activity in which our own C.I.A. has engaged around the globe.

democracy rests on the consent of the governed, and the governed are not permitted to give their consent to covert political operations because of their very nature. In time, covert operations will change the character of the institutions they seek to pre-

The C.I.A.'s shadowy network of domestic divisions should be shut down and the Agency confined by law solely to the collection of intelligence overseas-which is what Congress intended when it created the C.I.A. As matters stand now, a future President could unleash the C.I.A. at bome, as did Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard

The F.B.I. Director, Clarence Kelley, has announced be isn't leaving unless asked. Mr. Carter should ask. Mr. Kelley surrounded himself with J. Edgar Hoover's cronies, which is hardly the way to reform the F.B.L. Moreover, Mr. Kelley has publicly defended the F.B.L's infamous COIN-TELPRO operations, its program of harassment against Americans. That alone qualifies him for early retire-

The F.B.L's broad intelligencegathering function, which allowed it to penetrate large segments of American society with no clear legal basis to do so, must be prohibited by statute. A new law should limit the F.B.L to investigation of crimes, including conspiracy; in conspiracy cases, investigations should take place only on a showing of probable cause that a crime is being planned. Congress can and should draw careful standards so that potential terrorist acts do not become an umbrella for indiscriminate infiltration of society as a whole.

All Government wiretapping bug-ging and searches should require e court warrant that meets the standards of the Fourth Amendment. There should be no exception for "national security," or foreign-intelligence cases. The House should establish an intelligence watchdog committee as a counterpart of the new Senate intelligence committee.

These are the minimum changes to be made, New laws may belp, but it should also be remembered that existing laws have been repeatedly broken. Nor will laws protect us against a President who misuses his power. Ultimately, the outcome will depend more on whether as a people we believo in freedom, or fear it.

If we adopt the methods of our adversaries, we become indistinguishable from them. We lose by winning. We cannot uphold the law by breaking it, and we cannot preserve, protect and defend the Constitution-as Mr. Carter must pledge to do Jan. 20 -by violating its provisions.

A mercifully brief look at last year's results. My prediction of a Kennedy-Bentsen Democratic ticket, to face Republican nominee Potter Stewart, was slightly off the mark, and most other political picks were equally egregious. # Neighborhood-Saving

By Joseph F. Timilty

BOSTON-Tom Kelly has been a believer in Columbia-Savin Hill, a neighborhood in Bostoo's Dorchester section. But now he says his faith is shaky. After sinking $17,000 into improvements in his three-family house over the last two years, he is having second thoughts about his investment.

His confidence is sagging because of recent events like the torching of some vacant bouses that his neighborhood organization hoped to salvage for rehabilitation. But the big blow has been the announcement of a tax hike of $56, bringing Boston's property-tax level up to nearly $253 per $1,000 valuation.

"I'm really scared," Mr. Kelly says. "Some homeowners have told me that if they can't get enough income out of their houses to meet these new costs, they would just as soon walk away from them. We're all facing a situation now where we really get punished for the investments we make. The rents we charge just don't carry their share of the costs and the people we rent to simply don't have the incomes to pay more."

Mr. Kelly owns a three-decker on Dorchester Avenue, down the street from St. Margaret's Church. To those who know Boston by its neighborhoods, wood-frame three-decker houses are as characteristic of the city's architecture as any of the more historic landmark buildings downtown. Three-deckers comprise about 20 percent of all the dwelling units in the city. But, more important than statistical percentages, they represent the solid, working-class neighborhoods that grew up around churches and synagogues three generations ago.

Relationships among landlords and tenants have been close in the threedeckers. Tenants sometimes stayed for twenty or more years and reared e family. Owners made repairs and improvements, yet hardly ever raised

These relationships have all but disappeared in some parts of Boston. Many three-deckers have disappeared, victims of abandonment, vandalism and demolition. In more stable areas, rent increases have become the norm in the inflationary economy of the last five years. But despite the increased costs and the investments in improvements people like Mr. Kelly have made, the value of the houses has dwindled. Mr. Kelly and other homeowners have been struggling to turn things around in Columbia Savin Hill. He is something of a professional citizen participant, a breed that has grown in cities across the country to save the neighborhoods, He sits on the governing board of the local Neighborhood Housing Services corporation, e cooperative organization of neighborhood people and banks working together to improve mortgage lending.

Such people are looking to the new Carter Administration to recognize their work with a national policy on urban neighborhoods that will back up, if not guarantee, that their choice to stay and fight it out has not been wasted. Since the cities and the minorities provided Jimmy Carter with his margin of victory, their expectations are running high. Mr. Carter's major tools in responding lie in what he does with the community-development block-grant system and the direct-cash housingssistance programs that the Nixon-Ford Administration is leaving in his hands. He should work with the Democratic Congress to make a workable system for the neighborhoods, lowerncome people and minorities. The major feature of the housing-assistance program gives qualifying households a certificate of subsidy that allows them to go out on the private market and shop for a decent housing unit. This is a laudable goal, but as Mr. Kelly says, "A rent subsidy like that would really be the answer to bring properties up to sanitary-code standards and provide enough money to keep them that way."

Mr. Carter can help the neighborhoods by changing this cash-subsidy program to allow some of the money to be set aside for use in designated city neighborhoods where local residents are struggling against mortgage redlining and other forms of disin-

By channeling such money into designated neighborhoods, municipal governments can coordinate the use of their community-development blockgrant funds with area planners, residents' organizations and local thrift banks. This kind of Federal investment would be an incentive for banks to make mortgage and rehabilitation loans in areas where they might otherwise refuse to lend.

The new Administration can also change the allocation formula for distributing block grants to make sure that the lion's share goes to needy older urban communities where the worst housing conditions exist, and where the concentrations of lowerincome and minority Americans reside. Under the present formula, Boston's funding level will drop from about $30 million to under $12 million by 1980-a prospect that many older Northeast cities face. The people in their neighborhoods will be greatly affected by these reductions.

Both Houses of Congress expressed their concern for these problems this year by advancing legislation to establish a National Commission on Neighborhoods. Mr. Carter should endorse this effort by requesting speedy Congressional action, thus putting the Administration behind a total national commitment to save viable urban communities.

Business is bound to change.

- Change upsets people. Always has. Disrupts routine and habit patterns. Demands constant adaptation.

But change is inevitable. And essential. Inability to change can be fatal. Unfortunately, most of man's institutions are highly rasistant to changa.

This, as much as anything else, underlies tha explosive reaction of meny people.in our country in the past few years. They took a fresh and uncluttered look at the world around them, and foundmany institutions archaic. Higher education, Government, Religion, Business.

These institutions have bagun to respond to the naed for change, even if not always with braathtaking speed.

Among these institutions, business is by the nature of things compelled to change mora rapidly-and perhaps more reelistically-if it is to survive. Companies that cannot foresee change and adept to it quickly enough die. There is seldom anybody to subsidize business inefficiency for any length of time.

Ona reason business—especially big business-can respond to change. quickly is that basicelly it is in the business of change. Business depends heevily on forward planning, and planning is the orderly management of change.

 Another reason is thet business itself produces more change, probably, then any other institution. Through Its reseerch and development programs. Through new technology it develops and applies. Through new plants it builds. Through its need to be a good employer. Because its own long-tarm self-interest dictates a better life for people everywhere. Because it must face facts and think rationally about what may appear to be unthinkable.

Business can be plenty wrong, and wrongheaded, despite all those things we just listed. But its record for bringing change-with-meaning to society is impressive. Which has an obvious moral for anyone today who wants to changa the world, rationally and constructively.

Change doesn't always produca a Renaissance, of course. But it can-if business, and the rest of society, think hard and clearly enough about where we want change to take us. And how fast. And what the options are. And whether benefits at least equal costs. One sphere whera clear, contemporery thinking would produce some urgently needed change is in the stereotypes and obsolete concepts that soma people who should know better still harborabout ell big business. Some of those concepts may once have been valid ecross the board, and some, unfortunetely, mey still be valid with respect to some corporations. But not to ell.

Times have changed. So have many of us big businesses. Because change is what we're insaperably bound to.

Belonging Is Important For Long Island Family

GLEN HEAD, L.I.—All last week, while many students at Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn were planning trips to beach and ski resorts for their Christmas holiday, Nancy Manzione simply wanted to go home.

She had been dreaming of Christmas for many weeks during overnight shifts at the Medical Center, looking forward to spending time with her parents and r seven brothers and sisters.

Nancy is one of three Manzione children currently attending medical school—a remarkable record for one family. All over North Shore Acres, other parents and children comment on the Manziones' politeness, the children's high grades and their diligence as newspaper deliverers. For two months now, people have been telling a visitor, "You have got to meet the Manziones." Christmas time seemed an appropriate time as the large family crowds together with affection.

"You feel so secure in my house," Nancy said. "Once we get home, no-body goes out. We just sit in front of the fire, talking to each other. It's great to talk to the younger kids, to give them advice about school."

Some Don't Stay Close

This is not a good epoch for families. Everybody knows of families unable or unwilling to stay close, where parents are breaking up or children are drifting away. The holidays can be a time of heightened anxiety, when the normal pursuits of work and school are closed off and relationships with friends and relatives become more in-

Many people enjoy holidays, of course. The driveways of a number of the 99 homes in this quiet subdivision have been lined with out-of-state cars of children who have moved away. At the home of Norman and Edna Boyd, for example, six adults and six grandchildren slept over for Christmas and the living room was cluttered with new Christmas is also a time for greeting neighbors one usually passes by. Andy Frame, a high-school student, called it "the nicest time of the year in the Acres. People really say hello to each

There have been many large parties over the holidays beginning on Dec. 18, when Santa Claus arrived in George Degen's Cadillac in the driveway of Dan and Eileen Forbes, to greet the neighborhood youngsters. On Christmas Eve, Mr. Degen, who is president of the North Shore Acres Association, organized a Christmas carol sing in front of each home. Ooe resident, Katherine Lauber, could recall the therapeu-tic effect of a recent Christmas when her neighbors sang under her window, getting her out of a sickbed days ahead

Students Come Home

The three Manzione medical students 25 years old from the University of Pennsylvania; Nancy, 23, and Madeline, 22, from New York Medical College in Valballa, N.Y.

On Christmas Eve, 20 friends and relatives packed into the house after the 5 P.M. mass, for Mrs. Manzione's annual feast.

The mood was supportive, with no clashes for space or attention. Jeff, 16, and Stuart, 14, enjoyed teasing Madeline, who was wearing a dress and had her hair combed to her waist, waiting for her friend, Richard, to arrive. The boys told her they didn't know she had legs, having seen her only in jeans for Why do the Manziones seem so close?

One night this week, the three medical students, who have taken some courses in human relations, talked about the parents' instinct for creating a sense of family.

"When I first went away to college [New Paltz], I'd visit families with circumstances. I'd compare to mine," said James Jr. "But when both parents had careers and a lot of social commitments, sometimes there were problems. My parents have always spent time with us. I can hardly ever remember having a babysitter."

The Manziones have lived here since James Manzione built the house by himself 24 years ago. He used to be a construction boss, bot after two heart attacks he took a quieter maintenance job at C. W. Post College. The powerfully huilt man leaves the verbalizing to his vibrant red-beaded wife, who attended college briefly, then worked in public relations before her marriage.

"I would never denigrate being a housewife," Mrs. Manzione said. "You have to be a psychologist, economist, murse, cook, wife and mother. I don't feel I was cheated. When I gave up my job, that was what I wanted to

Sometimes, Mrs. Manzione says with a laugh, her children accuse her of "talking too much." Yet she recalls a girl telling her daughter, Nancy: "You can talk to your mother. When I get home, my mother is working and she has to rush to get dinner." Even today, Mrs. Manzione says, the three older children "are very frank about wanting my attention. They'll tell the younger ones, 'Get away from Mommy. It's my turn to talk to her." 'Our Parents Loved Us'

three oldest children grew up in the 1960's, when drug abuse was spreading in the middle-class suburbs. "We knew our parents loved us, and we didn't have to try that stuff," says anything about me my mother didn't know," says Nancy. "My father would say, 'Don't worzy what time you come in'—but I knew they'd wait up for me.

I knew they cared. Maybe drugs were a way for other people to get their parents to notice them. I've read that some people even try suicide just to be noticed. They really want to be ed the traumas that split families apart. Yet Mrs. Manzione insists, "Hey, we're not perfect. If I think the kids are wrong, I'll shout at them. And if I'm wrong, I'll apologize,

A year ago, Mrs. Manzione decided to earoli at Post College because, she explained, "Your hrain begins to rust if you don't use it." She recalls that her five children at home—Tommy, 18; Claire, 17; Jeff, Stuart and Laurie, 13were very enthusiastic about me going to college, but they didn't always pitch in with dishes or make meals when they could have. So I'd have to shout, 'Hey, give me some help."

Adjusting to Lower Income

The Manziones have had to adjust to a lower income since Mr. Manzione's presents," Mrs. Manzione said. "I think I feel more guilty than the kids. They hear kids from around here saying how they got a new stereo worth $400 to $500, but my children never seem to talk about these things."

"The kids wanted to give me a new tablecloth for Christmas," Mrs. Manzione said, "but I told them to wait until the January white sales. I didn't mind not getting anything. They all wrote me notes, I told them not to buy Christmas cards. It was too expensive.

The children say they were never pushed into high-paying careers. No doctor kits for Christmas," James Jr., said. But they chose medicine after thriving on the science program at North Shore High.

All three older children think their Roman Catholic religion has given them a direction too.

Some of this money, according to testimooy on record, went to public officials.

Manila Strip on Ninth Ave. Is Bit of Home for Filipinos

A brisk trade in macapino, tujo, patis and bijon is going on these days along the Manila atrip of Ninth Avenue. There, in the bustling block between 39th and 40th Streets, are half a dozen shops specializing in the foods of the Barranta Garcia, a fur-coated woman came in from Kew Gardens, Queens, the other day to shop at Filipino Lou Finkalstein's, the oldest and best known of the shops along the strip.

As Mrs. Garcia gathered up her packages and counted her change, Mr.
Finkelstein, a New York-born butcher who picked up a lasting affection for Philippine culture and cookery during service in the islands in World War II. pointed to bis shelves and identified her purchases:

her purchases:
Macapino (coconut meat preserve);
tujo (dried sardines); patis (brown fish sauce); bijon (white rice noodles); dilis (salted anchovies); kopak (butterfly fish), and the makings for denuguan (plg stomachs, snouts and blood).
That such exotic foods are available in such abundance on Ninth Avenue and in a store of other Philipping gree

and in a score of other Philippine specialty shops around the metropolitan area is a sign of the growth of the Flipino community in New York.

Growth in Professionals Other signs are the heavy representation of Filipino nurses and doctors on the staffs of local hospitals and the number of lawyers, accountants, bankers, secretaries and insurance salesmen who are active in the city's life. By one estimate, there are 35,000 Filipinos living in New York City today.

Among those who have made important places for themselves in the city are Runy M. Sarda Jr., senior vice president of Manufacturers Hanover Leasing Corporation; Lilia Elemente, former assistant treasurer of the Ford Founda-tion and now an independent consultant oo investments in Asia, and Dr. Eduardo M. Farcon, attending urologist at Bellevue Hospital and associate professor of clinical urology at the neighboring New York University Medical Center.

Most Filipinos in New York are recent immigrants. But they are quite unlike the earlier migrant generation of Filipino house servants, ship stewards and farm laborers who settled oo the West Coast, Rather, they are, for the most part, middle class, college-educated and fluent in English.

Why They Come

"Why do they come?" said Precioso
Nicanor, a spry, 70-year-old retired insurance salesman who heads a council representing 22 Filipino community organizations. "They come for more education, For more money. For more security. To be with families already here. Mostly for a chance to make a better life."

American immigration regulations.

American immigration regulations. which until this year favored professionals and people with higher skills, helped them toward these goals. And political repression in the Philippines, following the imposition of martial law by President Ferdinand E. Marcos In 1972, bas put a new push behind the middle-class exodus.

And a busioessman who makes fre-quent trips to the Islands said: "People back home watch what goes on here. They saw bow you deposed one President and put in another one with-out a drop of blood being shed. Be-lieve me, if the Immigration quota lieve me, if the immigration quota was bigger, you'd see how many more of us would leave."

But the sharp tooth of economic necessity also bites deeply. Per capital income in the Philippines is only $400 a year, and although professionals earn more, salaries of $1,000 a year are not uncommon for fully qualified nurses.

Dr. Farcon said "a higher income" was part of the reason, but only a part. Gesturing toward the battery of advanced diagnostic equipment in his Bellevue laboratory, he said:

"We have good hospitals and schools at bome, but nothing like this. Here you can practice the best medicine in the world."

The Farcons have four young children and they live in Leonia, N. J.,

where there are few other Filipinos but many friends. Dr. Farcon described their life as "very happy" and said he was particularly grateful for the oppor-emities he and his wife, an anesthesiologist, had been given to develop their

That also was the experience of Mr. Sarda of Manufacturers Hanover. Now 43 years old, he came to the United States in 1959 with a degree from the University of the East in Manila and quickly earned a master's degree in law at Yale University. He became a tax specialist, worked in law firms in Washington and Dallas, then for Citicorp here, and in 1974 was named to his present post. Home is a colony of 80 houses with shared tennis courts and swimming pools in Tarrytown, N.Y. There, the meals his wife serves are the same as when Mr. Sarda talks about his life here, he uses such words as "good." "happy" and "very comfortable," but he still feels a strong pull toward his homeland. Lifting his briefcase from the floor behind his desk, he said.

"I've been carrying my application for citizenship around for six months and I haven't signed it vet. I'm pretty sure I will eventually, but somehow t haven't been able to take that final step.

Desire for Home Ties

The desire to maintain home ties and identities is the main reason New York Filipinos have established more than a score of social and professional associations. Together, these groups have formed the Philippine Communities Executive Council, with Mr. Nicanor as president,

The council maintains a small, second-floor center at 297 Seventh Avenue, near 27th Street, and there, almost every evening, Filipinos gather for coffee and snacks, for chess and card games, for choral rehearsals and for talk about who has just come over from the islands, who has just passed the bar examination, and who has landed a good into landed a good job.

One reason the center is so active One reason the center is so active is that there are so few other places where Filipinos can meet other Filipinos. There are a few restaurants, among them the Maharlika on Fifth Avenue, near 46th Street, where the haute cuisine of the Philippines is served with entertainment, all under the direction of Nora Villanueva Daza, who also operates restaurants in the who also operates restaurants in the Philippines and in Paris.

No Ethnic Enclaves But there is nothing like a little Manila in New York. Unlike other immlgrant groups, the Filipinos have not settled in ethnic enclaves. Rather, they live scattered throughout the metropolitan area, with clusters of families in Queens, Rl. erdale, Westchester, Jersey City and Bergen County, but no-where in numbers large enough to dominate a neighborhood.

As a result, their presence in New York has gone unnoticed by many New Yorkers. Nevertheless, it is a sizable group and it is growing. The annual count of aliens conducted by the Immigration and Naturalization Service turned up 14.485 Filipinos living in New York State this year, up 2,320 from the previous year.

Those ilgures do not include those who already have become citizens. Nor do they include illegal residents who came on visitors permits and stayed on after the permits expired.

Libertito Pelayo, publisher and editor of The Filipino Reporter, a weekly with a national circulation of 7,500, believes there are 35,000 people of Philippine Islands origin living in New York City alone, and perhaps as many as 75,000 in the tri-state metropolitan area. Because so few New Yorkers have been to the Philippines, they often do not recognize Filipinos when they see them. They confuse them with Chinese or Japanese or other Asian peoples.

But Mr. Nicanor has his own theory of why Filiphos are not recognized and seem to fit in so well here. "It's because we are very ambitious people," he said.
"We work hard. We study hard. We're like Americans."

Here are 5 different ways to invest without going out on a limb

nvesting is like a lot of other things in life. There are no easy answers.

That applies even when you try to minimizerisk. You can put all your money into investments that reduce your risk to practically zero. But you'll also eliminate other things:

 The opportunity for a higher return. with a level of risk you can accept.

 The ability to earn tax-free income, also with acceptable risk.

If you don't want to eliminate those things, you come smack up against "no answers." But don't despair. We c help-and the help starts right here.

Strategy 1: Discount bonds plus growth stocks

Some bonds (called "discount bonds") sell for substantially less than their maturity value—usually because they were issued when prevailing interest rates were much lower. Which suggests an interesting low-risk strategy.

Let's say you have $25,000 to invest for 10 years. You buy $25,000 worth of 4 percent, high-grade bonds. But you pay only (say) $18,000. You now own securities that are scheduled to return $25,000 at maturity—say, in 10 years. And you still have the $7,000 difference in your pocket.

Use this $7,000 to invest in selected growth stocks with an average dividend yield of 2 percent. Then hold both the stocks and the bonds until the bonds mature. Meanwhile, the bonds pay interest. Here's what it all could add up to:

Assuming the total return on your stocks (growth in value plus dividends) comes to 9 percent a year, you should have $50,705 in 10 years, before taxes, when you sell the stocks and cash in the bonds. In fact—even if the stocks don't grow a cent-you can still expect a total return of $43,400 (see chart). Either way, it would be a handsome payout.

Of course, there's a chance that the stocks could become worthless. But even then you'd get your original investment back from the bonds alone—unless they defaulted, an exceedingly rare occurrence.

Strategy 2: A low-risk retirement plan

If you're self-employed, the U.S. Government will let you invest 15 percent of your salary (up to $7,500 a year) in a tax-deferred retirement plan. We can show you how to set up a plan based on high-quality, A-rated corporate bonds currently paying around 8.5 percent—tax-free, until withdrawal.

By investing $7,500 a year in a plan like this—and assuming you continue to earn an average return of 8.5 percentyou'd have a $931,000 nest egg in 30 years. With relatively low risk.

Strategy 3: Discount municipals with "personalized" maturity date

If you're in an upper-income bracket and want a lump sum years from now for college tuition or retirementthis might be the strategy for you.

(usually half your normal tax rate). And tax-free income until the bands mature. A Merrill Lynch Account Executive can help you select the bonds.

Strategy 4: Buy convertible securities

Convertible bonds and convertible preferred stocks have several advantages for prefe who want to reduce risks. They are less volatile than common stocks. They generally pay higher income. (We know some paying between 6.6 and 7.6 percent.) And you can convert them. to common stock in a rising market.

to help you gain a profit.

But note: Convertibles are a complex subject requiring careful study. Ask a Merrill Lynch Account Executive to explain them—and show you our analysts'

Strategy 5: Buy stocks for total return

All too often a dollar saved is a dollar nibbled away by inflation. Interest rates don't always keep up. But there is a way to fight back.

Invest for total return—high divid payout, plus a potential for modest growth in value. Your Merrill Lynch Account Executive can show you a list of stocks that have increased their dividends steadily. With stocks that keep doing that, you may not need much growth to get a total return that beats inflation.

More low-risk strategies

Merrill Lynch can also show you low-risk strategies for getting steady income. For cutting the taxes on your investment income. For balancing your investment portfolio. Or for getting government-guaranteed safety.

For details, fill in the coupon. Then visit or call a Merrill Lynch office and speak to one of our Account Executives.

The idea is to require the oil companies-big ones, anyway-to report in detail to the Federal Energy Administration on their oil-supply agreements with foreign governments, both signed and prospective. In other words, before a major oil-supply oegotiation was completed, an American oil company would have to notify the F.E.A.-and presumably the ageocy could raise objections to the deal or parts of it.

Such a regulation, as later oli company comments made only too clear, could alter the informally intimate relationship the big oil companies have enjoyed with the State and Treasury Departments and the national security staff of the White House. Such a regulatioo would appear-whatever the drafter's intection-to move the Government toward intervention in negotiations between the companies and tha member governments of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Suppose, for axample, a company were about to sign up with Iran to take a substantial quantity of Iranian crude for a year or two. Such an agree-

State Banking Aide Assails 50-Cent Credit Card Charge

A 50-cent service charge on credit-card users, imposed earlier this year by Citibank has come under attack by Leonard Lapidus, acting New York State Superintendent of Banks. In a statement prepared for recent hearings of the State Assembly committees on consumer affairs and protection, Mr. Lapidus did not mention the bank by name, but bankers have been watching public reaction to the service charge since it was imposed by Citi-

Fears that the Communists might come to power in Italy or France ap-pear to have played a major role in the moderate stance taken by Saudi Arabia in recent oil talks. Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, said in the cur-rent issue of the German news magazine Der Spiegel: "We are extremely worried about the economic situation of the West, worried about the possibility of a new recession, worried about the situation in Britain, Italy, even in France and soma other nations. And we don't want another regime coming to power in France or Italy.

The Saudi official added that "the situation in Spain and Portugal is not so healthy either." A Reuter dispatch said that he was asked whether he was referring to the possibility that the Communists might come to power in France or Italy, and he replied, "yes." Henry Crown, a major creditor of the Rock Island Railroad, which is now in bankruptcy reorganization proceed-ings, may yet have his way and push the line into liquidation. Federal District Judge Frank J.

U.S. Securities Sector Is Buoyed by Fed's Injection of Funds Into the Banking System

This strength came on tha heels of a pledge two days ago by President-elect Carter to work to keep New York City out of bankruptcy and to assure that all its borrowing needs were met in the future.

At Salomon Brothers, Albert A. Gross a money market economist, estimated that the Treasury will raise $21.5 billion of net new money during the first quarter of 1977. This would be about $1 billion less than the amount raised in the opening quarter of this year.

Making the Postal Float Pay Interest

Some astute individuals are earning extra income by paying large bills with checks written against their interestbearing money-market fund investments,

The strategy is particularly effective when the mails are bogged down, as they are at present with heavy Christmas deliveries.

At such times the postal float may last several days hinger than noimal. Until the investor's check is presented for perment against his money-market fund investment, he continues to carn interest daily on his shares.

Most of the 40 money-market funds offer check writing givileges, an innovation brought to the $3.5-billion industry about three years, ago. Only large checks are permitted, with $500 generally the lower limit.

However, many money-market fund shareholders pay monthly bills out of a single large check from the money fund deposited in their regular commercial bank checking accounts just before the bills are reid. the bills are paid. ...

But it is the relatively large single checks written directly for rent and purchases that, because of the postal float, bring additional interest income to the fund shareholder.

The Capital Preservation Fund Inc. of Palo Alto, Calif., a no-load money-market fund specializing in United States debt, says that the postal float can easily take five days. To get the full delay, the shareholder is urged to use checks written on a distant moneyfund clearing bank. At present, Capital is using the State Street Bank in Boston and the Bank of California in tha West. and the sank of Cantornia in the West.
Capital expects to add a clearingg bank in Helena, Mont., and a bank in Miami to give its shareholders further flexibility in maximizing postal float.

Typically, a well-informed West Coast bolder of Capital's shares would pay a West Coast debt with a check written against the State Street bank.

An Fest Coast shareholder, by contrast.

An East Coast shareholder, by contrast, would prefer to use Bank of California checks to pay his East Coast bills.

Capital provided a number of examples. A Florida shareholder pays his $1,000 monthly rent with checks drawn on the California clearing bank and, 12 times a year, earns five days' additional interest on $1,000. Over the year, at a current 5 percent return, the share-bolder would earn $8.32 in additional their interest-paying shares, the com-mercial banks, which hold $220 billion in demand deposits, are prohibited by law from paying interest on such

An even more advantageous use of float occurs when the payee is slow to react. One of the most notoriously slow institutions is the United States Government at tax time.

Federal, state and local governments are often overwhelmed with uncashed checks, and their inexperienced temporary staffs do not help matters. A wealthy West Coast professor paid his $176,000 tax bill with a check drawn against a money-market investment on April 15, 1976. The check did not clear until May 1, and the professor earned nearly $600 in interest in the meantime. The Federal Government is also slow to eash checks for purchases of Treasury bonds. One Illinois money-market fund shareholder bought $53,000 worth of Treasury bonds and his check did not clear for 10 days. He earned $72.70 on the money fund shareholder in the mean. on the money-fund shares in the mean

Some investors use money-market checks to pay stockbrokers. If an investor buys bonds from the broker, he will receive interest beginning on settlement day. If be makes sure the broker receives the check on settlement day, he may get six to eight days free ride before the broker cashes his check. - a rare example of the same money earning interest on a doubled-up basis.

Another popular means for maximiz-ing interest is to write money-market checks for escrow payments. One money-market shareholder put $40,000 in a fund—proceeds from the house be sold—and earned interest for two weeks on his $20,000 down payment on a new house. The funds weren't used until the check came out of escrow and he took title.

One final example colleges are no-toriously slow to process and cash tu-tion-checks. Thus the student—or the student's parent—can pay with a money-market check and earn income until the college gets around to cashing

The prospects of developing new domestic energy sources remain costly and uncertain. Brazil opened up its coasts to exploration by foreign oil companies this year for the first time in two decades, But according to some oil industry sources, the terms offered by the Brazilians, are not very attractive, since the country has not untow. tive, since the country has not unbovered great petroleum deposits in the United States oil companies are also uoder great domestic pressure to con-centrate their exploration efforts at home. And the problems that foreign oil companies have had with OPEC members have tended to discourage investments in the third world generally.

Projects' Costs Increased

The rising oil prices and other related inflation have lifted the cost of other Brazilian energy projects. Hydroelectric projects account for one-third of energy consumption, and in an effort to maintain this high level, Brazil is building the Itaipu Dam on the border with Paraguay.

But the price tag for Itaipu—which will generate six times as much electricity as Exports Aswan Dam when

Even before the petroleum crisis, the Brazilian military regime had set its sights on the development of its vast mineral and agricultural resources to pay for the capital goods and technology imports that would transform the country into a modern industrial society. Bot here again, most of these ety. Bot here again, most of these projects have been stalled by oil-related

In the plains of central Brazil, more than 100 million acres — one of the world's last remaining agricultural expenses—must remain undeveloped for years to come because of the high cost of fertilizers and pesticides derived from netrolaum.

And the dream of an all-weather trans-Amazon highway system, opening up the country's vast interior, has faded at least temporarily because the country can no longer afford the cost of petroleum-based asphalt to cover large stretches of road.

They dropped that bit in 1976 but are bringing it back in 1977 along with a new tagline, "Tires you can trust. B. F. Goodrich. The other guys."

Although it won't say how much it will spend for advertising (through Grey Advertising), Goodrich says it will be double this year's spending. The 1976 budget was cut back some because of a 141-day strike.

During the coming year Goodrich will be using all three TV networks and says its sponsorship of sports shows will be the biggest ever. Non-blimp. Un-cola. When will this negativism end?

Aubitron Meters in New York

Aubitron, until three years ago known as the American Research Bureau, said yesterday that it had in-stalled meters on a number of sets in the New York market in order to be able to report instant audience data and that all local TV stations had subscribed to the service. There are 370 meters and ultimately there will be 450 in the New York market.

Aubitron already has meters in Los Angeles and hopes to be in Chicago by January 1978. A. C. Nielsen, the big name in audience measurement, already has those three markets metered.

Headhunters Defended

Anyone familier with the agency busabout Norman, Craig & Kummel swear-off the use of search firms, must immediately have realized that Judy Wald would have something to say. She is, after all, one of the better known head-hunters.

Miss Wald, io a quickly delivered missive, makes the point that companies like hers are agents the same as ad agencies are agents and provide a service that in the long run saves both time and mooey for clients.

She admits that there has been a proliferation of personnel agencies that have "created confusion in the minds of some employers." But, rebelling, she said, is not the answer.

The do-it-yourselfer may experience short-term cost savings "but will ultimately require our broad overview of the talent market," she added.

King Kong' Meets Barnum

Do you think any advertising self-regulation body or any agency of the Government has asked Paramount Pic-tures to substantlate its advertising claim for "King Kong?" Do you think it could be substantiated? "The most exciting original motion picture event of all time." P.T. Barnum couldn't have done better.

John W. Kendrick, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said the twomonth rise in the composite index in October and November signaled that "the slowdown is behind us and now, since October, we've been entering into a peri-od of more substantial growth."

The indicator contributing most to the November improvement was a drop in the layoff rate in manufacturing. Other statistics on the upside, on the basis of the preliminary figures, were the average work week, change in total liquid assets, change in sensitive prices, new manufacturing orders adjusted for inflation and building permits.

The biggest depressing influence on the index was a drop in contracts and orders for plant and equipment. Other statistics that declined included vendor performance (delivery delays), communistock

September. In the previous few months he had visited several major oil coun-tries—Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iran—and he had come to the view that oil was too important to be left exclusively to private companies. Liberal Democrats in Congress cheered Mr. Zarb for a late but welcome conversion. . . . .

On one of those trips, Mr. Zarb On one of those trips, Mr. Zarb learned something about relations between an American oil company and a foreign government—he refuses to give details—that made him airaid. He was concerned, he said in early autumn, that an oil company might eoter an agreement with a foreign government that might be harmful to the interests of the United States an agreement that of the United States, an agreement that a Federal Energy Administrator would know nothing of until it arrived, signed and sealed, in the morning mail.

Mr. Zarb was aboot to publish a proposed regulation early in October. But he was told that it would be construed as a campaign ploy to win votes for ident Ford by making the Administration appear to be taking on "big oil."
Aides also said that a reporting proposal could hurt Mr. Ford in oil-prodoc-ing states.

So Mr. Zarb decided to wait until after the election. Meanwhile, the more Mr. Zarb's lawyers and planners talked about the idea, the more problems they saw with it. On Nov. 11 the energy agency published not a formal proposed regulation that would set the stage for a final regulation but rather an informs! invitation for comment on the general need for and scope of possible reporting requirements.

Some 30 oil companies responded.

All opposed the idea, One other company, Pan American World Airways, deeply worried about jet fuel costs, filed documents that officials said were generally supportive. One member of Congress, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, supported the idea. So did another Massachusetts Democrat, Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Exxon and just about every company said the confidential information reported to the Government would leak. Earlier, officials bad themselves ex-pressed concern that the documents would not be immune to Congressional

All the companies worried about the Government's getting into negotiations.
"Indepth intervention by the Federal Government in the negotiation process could reduce a company to a hopeless intermediary with no chance to compete with other companies, should dis-agreement occur between the two governments," the Continental Oil Company wrote. Company negotiators, Conoco said, would become mere messengers between governments.

Several companies said that the possibility of disclosure would make the foreign oil states harder bargainers. "Friendly producing states," said Mobile, "would be concerned that moderate positions might be exploited by their domestic and regional opponents." nents."

"We'll talk about it later," sald the actor, and that sentence soon became his-rebearsal refrain. Later, privately, the two of them talked about "it," and olution, an entente cordiale.

He is a show within a show. During one break he turned to Ruth Mitchell, who had restaged the musi-cal on the road, and said, "Did you ever see the Japanese version?" Then he did an uproarious 30-second, eye-popping, air-chopping samurai version of "Fiddler."

Often he would jibe at the show's original producer, Harold Prince, who scene, when a character toasted "our dear departed friends who lived in pain and hardship and died in pain and hardship." Mostel postscripted it with a mock Hebrew prayer ending.

After the first day's rehearsal, relaxing in his West Side apartment, Mostel talked about the challenge of Tevye. "He's one of those characters that's bottomless. In the darkest moments, he has a lightness, in the lightest moments, a darkness, A lot of actors are foolish. They make a hit in something and then they abandon it. If something is good to you, you should do it again."

Actually, Mr. Mostel would like to see bim do Tevye "every year at Christmas—like "The Nutcracker."

Changes in Adaptation

Asked to compare his 1976 Tevye with the 1964 model, he said, "I'm older-and dumber." His face broke into a wide grin.

To do Tevye again, he passed up a chance to do a new musical, "The Baker's Wife." The role later went to his archival, Topol, and the show shipwrecked out of town. He declined to gloat.

"I think 'Baker's Wife' could have been wonderful," he said. "The script was no worse than 'Fiddler' was in the beginning. 'Fiddler' was one of the worst scripts I ever read. But if you get the right combination of people. very often it works into something." How do you know when something is writ? "You smell it!" he said, and miffed the air mightilly.

In the case of "Fiddler," he feels extremely close to the material. "I was raised on Sholom Aleichem," he said, and talked about some of the changes in the musical adaptation. Tevye had seven, not five daughters. What bappened to the other daughters? There's no pogrom in the original. But there were pogroms at the time, and it's a good dramatic device. And Tevye didn't go to America, but it could happen." He said that one reason why he wanted to tour "Fiddler" was that it gave him an opportunity to visit art museums around the country. He is an arfist as well as an actor (wall space in his apartment is shared by Klee, Mostel, and other painters). On tour, he found time to paint. "I did five or # six hundred drawings. Too many self-portraits! There were no models

Now that be is back in New York, he has taken up his daily regimen. He gets up at 6 A.M., "before the telephone starts to ring," and turns on the radio to an FM station that plays classical music and issues birthday amounce-ments, One recent morning it was Jule Styne's birthday. "I called him up" he said. Another morning it was Bartho. said. Another morning it was Beethoven's birthday. "I couldn't call him up," he said. "He's deaf."

He works out on his Exercycle.
"Then I do my bath. I play with my boats." He explained, "When the kids were small, they had a lot of boats. They would leave them in the hathtub. They caught me playing with their boats."

Children Grown

The children are grown-Josh is an actor, Toby a stage manager at "Fid-dler"—but as their father would have lt, the boats are still swimming in the Josh, visiting his parents on his 30th birthday, walked into the room to see how rehearsal bad gone. "Did you face front and remember all your lines?" he asked. His father bristled. "Who taught you that?" Mostel asked Josh. "You did," Josh answered, and he hugged his father and kissed him on the top of his head.

On opening night the theater was filled with family, friends and well-wishers. Enthusiastically they greeted the actor's first appearance on stage. Conversing intimately with God, dancing with the grace of an ostrich, rbythmically twirling his paunch as if it were a spinning mobile, clownishly tucking a milk bottle under his chin and bowing it as if it were a violin, and singing a hearty song of "Tradi-tion," Mostel triumphantly returned to

After the final curtain, his dressing room was as crowded as a World Series winner's locker room. In his voluminous bathrobe, looking like a pa-sha on desert duty, he accepted the compliments at the same time that he jostled the complimenters.

Michael Bennett walked in and Mostel shouted at him, "I have a great idea for a show." A voice across the room said, "It's called 'A Chorus Mostel said to nine friend that he would see him at the opening-night party. "How will I recognize you?" joked the friend. "I'll put a flow-er in my nose," said Mostel.

A Very Strange Outfit

At the party at the Tavern on the Green, the star entered as if leading a victory march. He was wearing a very strange outfit, a cross between a tuxedo and a prayer shawl. He lonked like a Talmudic cowboy. "It's my last stab at uniformity," he announced, and threw himself into the merriment.

Usually at opening-night parties, reviews are read—either aloud or in private. In this case, the reviews would not be published until today. Nobody seemed to mind the delay. Among the celebrants at the affair were many of the drama critics. Some of them had already written their notices—the last time that Mostel played "Fiddler."

At 2:30 A.M., drinks were still flowing, people were dancing and Mostel was clowning. A waiter dropped a tray of glasses. "Mazeltov!" said Mostel, delivering the evening's benediction.

DEPUTY CHANCELLOR CRITICIZED BY GOLDIN

Dispute Over Layoffs at the Board of Education Heightens

By DAVID VIDAL

In a stinging four-page letter, Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin yesterday accused the deputy schools chancellor, Bernard R. Gifford, of dishonesty, demagoguery and bad faith for his questioning of the accuracy of the Comptroller's fire of the accuracy of the Comptroller's fig-ures for layoffs at the Board of Educa-tion.

The letter came in repsonse to one sent to Mr. Goldin last week by Dr. Gifford, and whose contents were disclosed Mon-day. It asserted that "arbitrary and unrealistic assumptions" in the methods for determining full-time and part-time staff; had produced erroneous personnel layoff data that could be burtful to the board. Dr. Gifford said the Comptroller's com putations "lead one to the erroneous con-clusion that the reduction in Board of Education personnel is less than it really

The comptroller's charged that the deputy chancellor "went to the press with a simplistic, distorted, deceptive, dishonest account of an issue," and that he bad "manufactured" the controversy that "deliberately obfuscates" actual fact. Reaction by Dr. Gifford

Dr. Glfford said yesterday: "I think Mr. Goldin's letter is a personal attack and I don't think he really means it. I have respect for his competence and hopefully he has respect for my competence."

On Tuesday, the president of the Board of Education, Dr. Robert J. Christen, issued a statement saying: "I do not believe Comptroller Goldin's approach has ad-versely affected decisions on the school budget made by other city and state offi-cials."

Dr. Gifford maintains that the approach results in a severe undercounting of both actual staff and the loss of services and be said he was concerned that "the continued distribution of erroneous Informa-tion by the Comptroller will undermine the city's credibility with the public and the Federal Government."

By his calculations, the cuts in Board of Education "full-time equivalent" personnel —the only ones at issue in this dispute —have amounted to 20,371 since 1974-75. The Comptroller's data put the number at 13 400 number at 13,400.

Dr. Gifford said he would not speculate on what impact a change might have. But he has said that up to 1,200 school jobs may be cut next year because of a projected $38.9 million reduction in the poses of reporting." He asserted that Dr. Gifford's method would produce numbers that "would he so far from real that they would invite ridicule rather than serious problems" for blacks. Knives and atteotion."

attention."

But Dr. Gifford said he welcomed an independent audit of hoth methods.
